The Secret Out

"She is courting a wretched fate," he so near to scandalous will not only destroy her in her own esteem, but sever all connection with her kindred and friends who have hitherto made up her world. She is lost if it is allowed to take place. Her mother must stop it, and since you do not feel yourself equal to the task. And to the mother Dr. Cameron's look of gloom did not

"Your are right," he assented. "Let Mrs. Gretorex be told of her daughter's position as soon as possible. But why teed I go with you?"

'To save your good name intact. You are expected to be on hand to marry Miss Gretorex at eight o'clock. If she is too ill to marry you, society will confine itself to commiserating your disappointment. But if you are not He stopped, for the doctor's whole manner had changed. "Shall we not go to the elevated road" asked Mr. Gryce in his quiet

"Certainly, certainly," came from the doctor, in ringing tones strangely in contrast with his late apathetic ones; anything to get there in time. Who knows but my honor may at least be saved." And the voice which gave the orders to the coachman now was his, and it was his foot that first touched the pavement and his form that led way up the stairs to the elevated

They were fortunate in catching a train immediately, and once upon it, both breathed easier. Twenty-five minutes certainly would suffice to carry them to One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth street, fifteen minutes more to take them across town, and fifteen minutes additional to see them at the house. Fifty-five minutes, and they had an hour and forty minutes. That is, an hour and forty minutes before eight o'clock. But Mrs. Gretorex had to be informed of her daughter's critical posi-tion and got down to the hotel by nine. Could it be done? The calm face of the detective asserted his confidence

But there are accidents that upset all our calculations. Just as they were awning up, you may be sure." congratulating themselves on the good time they were making, the cars gave a sudden jerk and came to a standstill. instantly all the ladies in the car rose, and next moment the gentlemen, for they had just left a station and were yet some distance from another.

"A break-down!" exclaimed the doc-"In the middle of the block!" added his companion. Yet they did not believe their own words, and it was some minutes before they fully realized that the engine had really given out, and that they were virtually prisoners, and liable to stay where they were for half an hour at least. When they did, and had calculated the possibilities of escape and found none (for like all such accidents it had taken place in the highest portion of the road), they turned from each other with an irrepressible expression of dismay. For even if they succeeded in reaching the house by eight o'clock, the half-hour now being lost made the expectation of getting Mrs. Gretorex to the hotel in time to save his daughter's marriage, no longer within the possi-lilities. Her fate was then decided, and by a power higher than her own. The thought affected the doctor deeply, for he knew, or thought he knew, enough of Dr. Molesworth to foresee anything but happiness for her in an alliance with him. Even if he were a man of her world, which he was not, he had characteristics of disposition that would try the meekest woman; and she was a decidedly haughty one, with memories behind her that would make a life of constant concession impossible.

In the blank of the dull window out of which he looked, he perceived her image, tied with all her accomplishments and lady-like proclivities, to this brusque, stern, self-contained man, whose ambition was as hard as his poverty, and whose will was united to something narrow and constrained, rather than to what was broad and lelpful. The result was pity. Not the pity that is akin to love, for love he could not have now or ever again for this woman. The shock she had given his pride had killed its very germs in his heart. Even if he could bring himself to believe in the detective's plausible explanation of her conduct, and find in her very inconsistencies the evi-dence of a hidden and baffled affection for himself, his feeling must still remain one of pity alone. The fact that he saw her face as never before; that its least line struck him with a sense of beauty that had sometimes been lacking in his contemplation of her, did not go far to dispel this conviction. Misfortune while separating them had emphasized her figure in his eyes; and though she was his no more, he could not but marvel over the fate that had come between him and one whom he now saw could easily have been his ideal of what was personally fascinating and attractive. The Genevieve he had seen at his last interview—not the one he had seen today—was beauti-ful: and pitiable as it was to consider had shown signs of that feeling attributed to her by his companion. He flushed as he remembered it, and rig-re rose from his seat and walked the length of the train, talked to the en-crously turned away his thoughts. But they had taken deep root, and although  gineer and interested himself in one or two passengers whose countenances betrayed apprehension, ne could not escape them, nor substitute with any other vision the picture of her face as it had looked to him on that night. He saw it in the clouded skies as he glanced out, in the plaze of the fire as he peered into the furnace, finally in the abstracted visage of his compan-ion, as he returned to his old seat and sat down again by the detective's side. Do what he would-and his pride impelled him to make very effort possible—the shy, almost beseeching glance so new to those proud eyes, the bright, alluring smile, even the turn of her form as she looked back on leaving him, would recur to his memory with a photographic distinctness that effectually blotted out the wild disheveled woman of whom he had that hateful and stolen glimpse through the curtains. Had it not been for the hurried beating of his heart, the fierce, almost unbearable, irritation of his nerves worn to exasperation by these lingering moments of enforced waiting, he could almost have imagined that the events and revelations of the day had been a dream, and that he was going forward with warmth and heart and hope in his soul to a marriage that promised love and honor. As it was, no clinging and perdeclared. "A marriage perpetrated in this manner and under circumstances man could blot out the shameful fact man could blot out the shameful fact that he was on his way to anything but a happy bridal scene; that instead of honor he should meet mortification, and in place of love, defeat and possible

Mr. Gryce-who, in the wisdom of his old age, never chafed at what was unavoidable-had nothing to say during this time of inaction. Possibly he had taken the opportunity to study up some other case, possibly he thought silence more discreet than speech; at all events he made no effort to break it, and the minutes went by, and the seemingly in-trminable half-hour came to an end, without a word having been uttered between them. But with the first onward movement of the car both roused and Mr. Gryce spoke. "Thirty-five minutes lost! That's bad! But if the fates are propitious we may succeed in our intentions yet. Come to the door and don't stop for any courtesies now. Seconds are of importance now." And seconds were made use of. Old as Mr. Gryce was, he showed that when hurry was demanded not even his proverbial rheumatism stood in the way. As soon as the cars stopped at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, they were out of them, and signting a train on the cable road, ran, caught it and were on their way across town before some of their fellow passengers had reached the bottom of the elevated

There was no delay this time: St. Nicholas avenue was reached at a quarter to eight, and as they had but a few minutes' walk before them, they stepped out with a decision that was almost hopeful. Suddenly a carriage rolled by them.

"Good God!" exclaimed Dr. Cameron, "a guest going to the wedding." Another carriage and another; the street seemed alive with them.
"Why didn't I think of this?" muttered the doctor, feeling the cold sweat breaking out over him. "Did you expect anything else?" asked the detective. "The parents, hoping for her return up to the last, naturally could take no measures to warn their guests. You will even see an

"'Tis horrible!" came from his comwith hitter emp the corner of St. Nicholas Place he almost stopped as if he felt himself unto proceed. But the detective's firm figure passing hurriedly on, he recovered from his momentary weakness and followed him.

Meanwhile the stream of carriages kept up, and presently they could hear the slamming of doors as their occupants alighted. Something in the sound, in the general aspect of things, seemed to move the doctor strangely. "Hark!" cried he, clutching at the de-ective's arm to stop him. "There is tective's arm to stop him. "There is no confusion, no delay; the guests go in and are received. And look! Lights -lights from basement to garret! What goes it mean? Do those wretched parents still hope that she will come?"

College, and declare its sympathy with Huron College and its work; that while the Synod is unable to devote any of its funds to the educational objects of the college, the members feel they would be out of harmony with the devotion of the Church of England to higher education, if they did not accord their willingness to support any reasonable plan which may be adopted in the various parishes of the diocese for providing aid to the college."

The debate was participated in principally by the mover and seconder, Rural Dean Mackenzie, of Brantford; Prof. Sherwood, of the college staff, and Rev. Mr. McCosh, of Chatham, and resulted in the unanimous adoption of the resolution.

The committee on provincial organization submitted the report of the Diocese of Toronto upon the subject, and commended it to the Synod for adoption. The first section recommended that the boundaries of the several ecclesiastical provinces be co-terminous with the civil boundaries thereof. The second section proposed to transfer the authority of the several provincial Synods. The first recommendation was approved of, but the second was not wholly acceptable, the Synod passing a resolution favoring the adherence to the resolution passed last year, "That the General Synod shall not take away or interfere with any rights or power of any diocesan synod within its own territorial limits."

Five amendments to clause 20, of which due notice had been given by Rev. David Williams, were withdrawn. Mr. A. H. Dymond moved: "That a committee of nine clergymen and seven laymen be appointed to consider what amendments may be necessary in canon 22 on 'The Discipline of the Clergy, and canon 20 on 'Differences Between Clergymen and Their Congregations.' Mr. Dymond's resolution met with the hearty approval of the bishop, and he (Mr. Dymond) named Revs. Dean Innes, J. C. Farthing, Alfred Brown, W. Craig, T. R. Davies, Rural Dean Mackenzie, Canon Hill, Canon Young, and Archdeacon Davis as the clerical members, and Messrs. Matthew Wilson, Q.C., R. Bayly, Q.C., S. Smith, Charles Jenkins, T. H. Luscombe, Judge Ermatinger and A. H. Dymond, as lay members. The bishop was named chairman, and the committee will report next year.

A memorial from the Diocese of Toronto was received, asking the Synod to aid in having the public school laws so amended as to make provision for a half-hour of religious instruction every day in the school hours. In connection with this a notice of motion by Mr. W. J. Imlach was considered, requesting Bishop Baldwin to annually appoint a committee on religious instruction in the public schools, with power to co-operate with similar committees from other synods. No action was taken in the memorial. Mr. Imlach's motion was adopted.

Rev. Alfred Brown's amendment to make the proposed pro rata reductions of grants on the basis of the whole stipend instead of on the incomes derived from the mission fund, was warmly discussed and lost

Mr. Charles Jenkins introduced in a very able manner a resolution favoring sider the advisability and expediency of petitioning the General Synod to take measures for bringing before the next Pan-Anglican Conference the question of a revision and expansion of the ordinal for deacons. Rev. D. Williams seconded. Carried.

SYNOD CLOSED. The 38th session of the Synod of Huron was brought to a close at noon today with the usual fervent farewell from the Bishop of Huron. The business of the Synod this year was considerably lighter than usual, and it was transacted with the promptness and dispatch which has characterized meetings of a similar nature in the past. In his closing address, the bishop said: "In looking back upon the work done, the most serious legislation which we have had was in reference to the finances of the diocese, and I can only trust that the members will labor for the removal of the debt and the placing of the Synod in the best possible light, and the funds on a good, sound basis. next most important regislation is the proposed change in the limits of the diocese. Make it a matter of prayer. It is a matter of deep moment, and we wish to do only that which is best. The appointment of a committee to see that the public schools are given a half hour's religious instruction daily also one of vast importance. The true education of our young is foremost when we see the secularization of the young of our age, and it consequently behooves us to endeavor to put in a plea for their education in the eternal truth. We will now depart with three determinations: First, to pray more earnestly for the weal and influence of the diocese; second, to be bound closer together in the principles of unity and fraternal love; and thirdly, to do more in our daily life in the building up of the blessed kingdom of our Redeemer and the establishment of his church in this particular part of his vineyard,"
MANITOBA SCHOOLS,

The resolution on the Manitoba school question, which was offered by Rev. Mr. Beaumont, came up for discussion, and instead of an hour, as was expected, it occupied about one minutes' time. This resolution has been already published. It strongly condemned any federal coercion of Manitoba, and declared the separate school system pernicious.

As soon as the resolution was announced there was a mingled chorus of "Drop!" "Withdraw!" "Lost!" etc. Addressing the mover, Mr. Dymond stated that he thought the remedial order was about as dead as a door nail. Bishop Baldwin also informed Rev. Mr. Beaumont that he considered it wise to withdraw the resolution, which

THE BISHOP'S BIRTHDAY. Today was the anniversary of the Bishop of Huron's birth, and when the Synod was deep in the regular business on the paper Dean Innes crose and moved the suspension of the order of business. He then announced the fact, and in the name of the Synod wished the head of the diocese many happy returns.

The applause throughout the dean's remarks was loud, but at their .conevery cleryman and layman rose to his feet and continued the clapping of hands and stamping of feet. Bishop Baldwin gratefully acknowledged the good wishes of the Synod.

GENERAL BUSINESS. Rev. Robert Sims offered a notice of motion that Bishop Baldwin be requested to have a resolution drafted. expressing the desire of the Synod to record its gratitude for the success vouchsafed to the reformers of Spain and Portugal in carrying on their work, and welcoming the consecration of a bishop for the Spanish Reformed Church. Mr. Matthew Wilson, Q.C., of Chatham, seconded, and the motion was unanimously adopted. As a loyal and patriotic churchman, Rev. G. B. Sage, of London West, introduced a resolution in regard to the

which practically stated that there were only held two. He wanted such teachings condemned. It was explained, however, in the discussion that the inter-diocesan committee of the Provincial Synod was not responsible for the teaching contained in the leaflet, as the committee simply arranged a scheme of lessons. The comment was issued by the Diocese of Toronto committee. At the suggestion of Mr. Wilson the bishop will be requested "to call at-tention to the objectionable features of the leaflet.
