REQULAR CORRESPONDENCE OF THE " COLONIST.

PARIS, Sept 8, 1870,

The Crown Prince has changed his route-he will not march on Paris. Indeed his intentions have been in this respect, viewed as a ruse. With the season far advanced, and communication intercepted, his chances of seizing the capital are slender. He might fill the ditches with thousands of his men. and march across them, as a bridge, but inside the fortifications he would find such fermidable barricades at every step goaded by a relentless foe, that victory would be impossible.

Paris is serene, be the results what they may. The Empress has resolved to remain here, and of sourre the diplomatic Corps also. Were she to leave, she would give the opportunity to set up, or to make an attempt, a Provis-
