WHAT CAUSES THE BLUES

London, Eng.—Doctors have discovered that the "blues" or "mental depression and irritability" is really a disease caused by defective circulation in the cells of the brain.

The "British Health Review" says by improving the circulation, there is an immediate improvement in the mental outlook.

If this is the case, we Canadians do not have to wait for foreign scientists to pursue their investigations any farther. We have the cure for the "blues" in those wonderful fruit liver pills called "Fruit-a-tives".

It is doubtful if the greatest physicians abroad will ever discover any more equal to "Fruit-a-tives" to purify and enrich the blood and improve the circulation.

They go straight to the root of the trouble, stimulating the torpid liver and kidneys and regulating the bowels. Thus they cleanse the whole system and renew vitality, mental as well as physical.

The Siwash in literature is something entirely new, and yet even this is possible. Since the Kistelas Canyon News was established, the Siwash of the Skeena have learned that there is greater publicity in the printed word than even in signs upon the tribal totem pole. Hence the appearance regularly of such contributed district news as the appended items:

LEUT.-GOVERNOR

GREET'S DAIRYMEN

Address of Welcome at Yesterday Afternoon's Session of B. C. Association—Officers Appointed for Year

An address by Lieut.-Governor Patterson was the feature of Friday afternoon's session of the British Columbia Dairymen's Association's annual convention. His Honor was introduced before the regular proceedings, and he spoke briefly but forcibly of the part the dairy industry takes in the development of a country. British Columbia was no exception, and he thought it only fair to those engaged in the pursuit to say that they were attending to their responsibilities in a faithful and enterprising manner.

With the dairying was associated in the former usually were tillers of the soil to a greater or lesser extent. Every plough that was placed in a new field meant something contributed to the prosperity of the province, just as every shipment of mineral from British Columbia's shores meant a step in advance.

The association he was addressing had done much in the past in forwarding the industry with which they were allied. There was no doubt that the progress that had been made since the inception of the organization. Important steps had been taken and were still evident.

Concluding, the Lieut.-Governor wished the delegates assembled to listen to suggestions, and to give advice was a custom that redounded to the benefit of every individual and to the business as a whole. It wasn't necessary to go over the ground to show the progress that had been made since the inception of the organization. Important steps had been taken and were still evident.

Officers Elected. Officers were elected as follows: Honorary president, A. C. Wells and Mr. Buckingham; honorary vice-presidents, Messrs. Shannon and Bishop; directors (Island), Messrs. Menzies, Duncan, Collins, and Aitken; Mainland, Messrs. Stevens, Davie, Thompson, Mulford, Page, and Webb; upper mainland, J. T. Bardsley and E. A. Cameron.

Immediately after this business a temporary adjournment to witness a post-mortem and lecture conducted and delivered by Dr. A. Knight. He had brought two cows on the field, one in an advanced stage of tuberculosis and the other in which the white plague was in an incipient stage, being disassembled only after the most careful tests.

In his opening remarks the doctor explained how it was possible to ascertain whether the disease had obtained a hold of any members of a dairy herd, illustrating his points by the use of the cattle supplied. This was done by the development of tuberculosis was laughed and an examination of the lungs and other organs took place, the spectators being shown the ravages of the disease. This bovine, it was shown, was in the grip of the sickness to such an extent that it had but six months at the outside to live under ordinary circumstances. Its udders were but slightly affected, but Dr. Knight claimed that it wouldn't be long before its milk would be exceedingly dangerous. Of course, it shouldn't have been used, as the animal stood, but later the germs finding their way into the milk, would have been even more virulent and threatening. The other beast was then killed, and its organs were tested had been correct in showing that it was in the early stages of tuberculosis.

On returning to the hall, Mr. Shopland, who was elected president, took the chair. He delivered an address, declaring that he accepted the honor imposed upon him with considerable diffidence, for two reasons. The chief one was the great responsibility attached to the office. He felt that he was hardly capable of giving satisfactory service, inasmuch as it would occupy much time, and he was a busy man. The second reason was that he was stepping into the shoes of A. C. Wells, a man who had proved eminently fitted for the place. He regretted that he had felt it necessary to retire, but Dr. Shopland promised that he would do his utmost to see the association through.

R. W. Hodson, the secretary-treasurer-elect, then begged permission to read a telegram which had just been received from Mr. Wells. It was as follows: "Congratulations to the annual convention. Congratulations to the dairymen on the progress made during the past year." This was received with enthusiastic applause.

"Contagious Abortion" was the subject of a highly instructive address by Dr. Hadwen. He told of the investigations and their results of an English commission, which had been in operation for the past five years, into the causes and the cure of this affliction. He said that it had been discovered that cows in the habit were the victims of a disease which might be prevented and cured. He advised that the herds where this prevailed that the animals be inoculated with a preparation recommended by the commission. This was not absolutely a cure, but the result of experiments proved that it would assist the cows to resist.

Practical Feeding. After a vote of thanks had been presented Dr. Hadwen, W. J. Langdon, president of the Washington State Dairymen's Association, was called in for a few remarks on the practical feeding of dairy cows. In his introduction he assumed that the practical dairy feeding means feeding for profit, for the money there is in it, and not for health or for fun. Among the things necessary for profitable feeding is a cow that will make good use of her feed; another is a man that knows how to feed her properly; and to do this he must have a scale, a milk sheet, and a tester. Professor Fraser, of the Illinois Experimental Station, says the cost of keeping a cow that will give 2,000 pounds of milk, at $24 for feed and $26.30 for her care, depreciation, interest, taxes, etc., or $50.30 for care, etc., of $74.50, is low enough for most of us."

He went on to say that the average production per cow for the United States is less than 4,000 pounds of milk. And he figured that the man who kept twenty cows, at an expense which he quoted as "drawing the magnificent income of $100 a year to educate his children by his automobile, travel, and attend dairy meetings." (Laughter.)

He continued: "Some dairymen are making a good deal more than this we know, and some must be making much less. When we started dairying we wanted to make more than $100 a year—we were ambitious to make enough money to enable us to hire a part of our labor, and to be able to get away once in a while to see what others were doing. We wanted a good attractive home with modern improvements. A good orchard, with plenty of fruits of various kinds the year round. We wanted to give our children a college education. We dreamed of a holiday once a year when we could get away from the cares of the farm and see something new—something different. We knew that $100 a year wouldn't do this; but we thought we knew how to do better. We did as we went out later." (More laughter.)

Mr. Langdon continued, giving a number of methods of feeding adequately and cheaply which had been introduced elsewhere with success. He claimed—and this was the principal point of his address—that it was possible, by feeding steamed alfalfa, to cut down the grain ration one-half. And, in conclusion, he quoted the remark of a prominent dairymen: "Feeds vary more or less in quality, chemical composition, and digestibility; and it may be necessary for various reasons to increase or decrease the daily allowance." He declared that probably this is so, for the more we gather the less we seem to know.

After an inspection of the milking machine in operation, the delegates came to the city to meet at the banquet at the Foodie Dog restaurant.

Delegates Banquetted. At 6 p. m. the delegates to the Dairymen's convention were entertained to a banquet in the Foodie Dog cafe, at which over seventy delegates were laid. The affair was highly successful, the delegates being thoroughly enjoyed. Flowright's orchestra was in attendance and played while dinner was in progress. Songs were given by J. G. Brown and B. Morrison.

The opening toast of "The King" was honored with the singing of the National Anthem followed by three cheers. The toast of the government of British Columbia was proposed by Mr. Foster of Eburne, who spoke eloquently on the strategic importance of British Columbia in Empire affairs. This province, he said, occupied a position more important in events of the future than any other portion of the Empire. Of the government, he spoke as an institution and not as the present administration. The province had a community of self-governing Anglo-Saxons, determined to uphold the honor of the British Empire. He was persuaded that since the inception of self-government in the provinces each successive administration had improved on the one preceding it, and he believed that this process would continue to evidence itself in the forthcoming years.

W. H. Hayward, M. P. P., responded to the toast, saying that he believed that the members of the government and every government which the province had had, did their best for the interests of the people as a whole. He complimented the dairymen for the good results which they had achieved through co-operation. They had shown by their success what such methods would do, and it remained for other branches of the industry in the province to follow their example.

The toast of the Dominion department was proposed by E. W. Hodson, provincial livestock commissioner, who dealt with the success which had attended the efforts to improve the matter of experimental farms. In the Dominion and Provincial departments in the work of agriculture were shown in many instances to work hand in hand, and as a consequence a considerable progress had been effected. Thanks Department.

Dr. S. F. Tormie in reply took occasion to thank the provincial agricultural department for the assistance it had given the Dominion department in the province. He also stated that the stock breeders had rendered every service in their power to forward the work for the general good of the community.

The toast to "The City of Victoria" was proposed by F. G. Quick. He referred to the growth of the city which he remarked on his succeeding visits, and also dealt with its beauty. Dr. Lewis Hall, who replied in the absence of Mayor Morley, said that much of the prosperity, both on the island and the mainland, could be attributed to the work of the dairymen. He believed that when other branches of farming in the province would follow the methods employed by the dairymen they also would show similar strides. British Columbia possessed as fine a body of agriculturists as there was in any province in the Dominion.

Other toasts honored were those of "The Dairymen's Association Across the 49th," "The Press," and "The Ladies," after which the banquet came to a conclusion.
