But regiprocity in manufactures, if through it American goods were to have the advantage over British goods in the Canadian markets, would strike at England's selling interests directly, and so the thing has never even been proposed until in these lates days by Mr. Wiman and his Canadian asso-ciates. The Mail will have it that when Sir John talked of reciprocity of trade or reciprocity of talked of a comparative position as a manufactures as well as in agricultural products. We do not at all believe that he find, what then? Is would prove merely that Sir John had not then attained to the same idea of Canada's comparative position as a manufactures as grown and expanded a greast deal in the intervening years, and Sir John's et mate of the importance of sufficiently pro-tecting these interests has grown too. assert that Canada needs Protection a great deal more new, when her manufactures are many and large and various, than she did forty years ago, when she had no manufactures at all to speak of. And, correspondingly, that she has more need of Protection for manufactures acw than she had twenty years ago, or ten years ago. Admit that Sir John is mere of a Protectionist now than he was during the N.P. antation period, say 1876-77.
8. The world moves and Sir John moves with it; that is all. The whole civilized would, Great Britam only excepted, is more protectionist new than it was ten or fifteen years ago. It would not detract from Sir John's standing as a stateman were you to prove that the times had changed, and that he had changed with them.
Deserve that the change referred to is not one of the different management required to meet a nation's changed material circum stances. Before Canada had few manufactures to the searce of the growers is should not surprise special commission has made a report to chusetts Legislature on the abolition of grade crossings on railways. There are 2280 such crossings in that State, of which 1393 are unprotected by gates, flags or bells. The commission declares that the expense of abolishing these sources of danger in likely to grow greater each year it is put off, and wisely remarks that "if steps are to be their gradual abolition the first thing to be done is to stop making new ones." That is certainly an important point, and it applies with as much force in Ontario as in chusetts. Our own Legislatures should give serious attention to this whole subject as toon as possible. Not many mornings ago World gave a column to despatched narriting a half dozen fatal accidents ring in one day at grade crossings in this nce. Not a night passes without evi dence in the press reports of the danger to life at these crossings. So frequent are the fatalities that not one in ten finds its way into the papers. The grade crossing must go.
