

HOME RULE THE ONE PLANK

Lord Playfair says the Liberals will stick to it—A Warmth of Colonial Foes.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—Speaking of the Liberal party in England, Lord Playfair, who is here on a visit, said today: "We are as resolute as ever, though we do not see the possibility of getting back to power for another five or six years. The majority is overwhelmingly against us, but not because the people are against Liberal principles, but because we went to the country with too many questions. We should have had one or two well defined measures which we could offer to the people, who on the contrary, were mystified by a long and indefinite program."

"Will the Liberal party now drop Home Rule from their platform, or will they still be faithful to it?" "Assuredly they will be faithful to it. It is their foremost question. They are pledged to it, and will not introduce it at the first opportunity." "Is your opinion that the Liberal party will give a modified Home Rule measure to Ireland?" "I should not be surprised if they would. They certainly ought. England and Scotland have a home rule movement in the shape of a party, and it would be a pity if the Liberal party should not have the same."

CHINA HATES FOREIGNERS

To This Mr. Foster Attributes the Recent Outrages on Chinese.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—John W. Foster, who acted as agent for the Chinese Empire in the recent negotiations connected with the war between China and Japan, passed through Chicago yesterday on his way from Washington to Minneapolis, where he will address the Episcopal general convention on the subject of Foreign Missions. Speaking of that subject, Mr. Foster said: "I may say in a general way that my observations have confirmed me in the belief that the Chinese are exercising a salutary influence among the people of the far east. Much good has been done in the past. Of that I am certain, and I am very sanguine that even much better results are promised for the future. Much has been said about the recent outrages in China being due to religious fanaticism and to the hatred inspired by the efforts of our missionaries to spread the Christian religion among the people of that country. I do not think this is true. However, I think it is not being an outcropping of it, it is a misapprehension which exists towards foreigners."

"I am disposed to think that the Government of China has been acting in good faith in the matter and I certainly expect to see the desired result met out to those who have been responsible for the terrible outrages."

FORGOT HER OWN NAME

Feeling Case of Sudden Loss of Memory.

London, Oct. 6.—A notable loss of memory case, involving a confusion of personality, is engaging the attention of scientists and the public. The case is that of a woman who was identified on the promenade at Brighton found herself unable to tell her own name, address or anything of her life. She said she had felt something break inside of her head. The authorities, unable to find out anything about her, had her sent to the workhouse. There was nothing on her person which would lead to her identification. She conversed as an educated woman on the things around her. Her husband was perfectly blank as far as the past was concerned. Her husband, who is a civil engineer, had been working the last night and was recognized by the woman. She had no idea how she got to Brighton. The doctor says that while she was struggling to remember her name she often said it was Trilby.

Mrs. Kellner's maiden name was Celia Dube. She was born in Montreal in April, 1855. She was married in Ottawa, Ont., on Jan. 25, 1870, to William Shields, who died on April 30, 1879. After she became a widow she went to work in Chicago hotels in 1884. She met Kellner, who had just reached his majority.

Mrs. Kellner asserts that Kellner told her that the marriage was not legal, as the ceremony had been performed by a blacksmith. They quarreled a few weeks later and parted, signing an agreement of separation. She then returned to the care of Shields, and went to Denver, where she was married to Gen. F. Bartlett on Dec. 2, 1886. Bartlett soon discovered that Kellner was alive, and brought an action for annulment. A decree was granted in his favor in Nov. 18, 1887. She was then arrested by the police on Monday and Tuesday last. None of the bodies of those killed in the Kasim quarrel has been identified. It is expected that the bodies of many of those who lost their lives during the riots were thrown into the bay.
