SMALL POX IN LONDON, ENG.

In speaking of the possibility of stamping out small-pox by vaccination, we have on several occasions mentioned the success of the war against the malady in London. We have not, however, at the moment of writing had at hand any exact statistical information; and we have, therefore, been obliged to content ourselves with a general statement of the fact. But we have now, by the mail the usual abstract of the Registrar-General's report for the preceding quarter, and we find this remarkable fact—that the whole number of deaths from small-pox in London was but ten for thirteen weeks. Now, London is known to contain more than three millions of people—that is to say about as many inhabitants as the whole Dominion of Canada, so that there were a smaller number of deaths in that population in three months, than there were in Montreal in three days only, a couple of weeks ago. Now this is not a matter of accident; for two or three years ago London was greatly embarrassed to find hospital room for small-pox patients. It is the effect of careful and general vaccination. We may, perhaps be asked why vaccination did not prevent the spread of the disease before? We reply that so far as laymen can venture to express an opinion, it seems to have been because vaccination had for some time been neither general nor careful. The generation which immediately followed that of Jenner and the discovering of vaccination, knew only too much of small-pox. It was the dread of every beauty, the cause of apprehension in every household. The marks of its ravages were everywhere visible, not only in diminished families, but in the enduring scars which disfigured many a fair face. That generation eagerly adopted the prophylactic which science offered to it, and for many years small-pox was almost unheard of; but with its disappearance came a natural forgetfulness of its dangers, and both medical men and the general population became more or less indifferent to their duty. A large portion of the population has certainly neglected to protect itself at all, and a large number of medical men have, we imagine, been far from extremely careful as to the character of the virus which they employed. It is to be supposed that this defect in practice, if it has really existed, has been most frequent in private practice. We see no reason to believe, indeed, that neglect as to choice of virus implies inoculation with other disease than cow-pox; but we apprehend that the virus has frequently been allowed to lose its energy by being kept too long before use. How it was, however, that small-pox invaded London in common with the rest of the civilized world, some three years ago, is of comparatively small consequence. It is of much greater importance that one hundred and twenty thousand people in Montreal, a fortnight ago, lost forty-one persons by small-pox in seven days; while three millions and a quarter of people in London lost only ten during the last three months for which the official statistics are complete. We know, at all events, how that immunity from a very recent plague was brought about, and we can follow the same course.—Montreal Herald.

A CHINESE MISSIONARY.

The New York Times says:—"We have long foreseen the possibility of a missionary to our country from the heathen, and one has at last arrived in the person of Wong Chin Foo. Alas, yes! Bitter and humiliating as is the truth, he is a Chinaman—nay, more, a political refugee. He has recently arrived in Boston, and at once begun his labours among the sceptical people of that modern Athens. Consternation fell upon the audience when Wong Chin Foo lifted up his voice in the Parker Memorial Hall; for here was an audacious heathen from the extreme East who had not come to sit at the feet of the wise men of America but essayed to teach them a lesson. In this unpromising political refugee was none of the bland and deferential submission of the low-class Chinaman. No bias that America is to lead the world, or that she will startle China from the inactivity in which she has lain so long, passed his Oriental lips. No compliments to the society of the young and energetic continent on which he had so newly set his feet came from his oracular mouth. Paralyzed by his boldness and shocked by his irreverence, they listened minutely to this child of the centuries, this apostle of fixeness, who with delicate irony masked under velvet words, scoffed at the progress made by the sons of the Pilgrims, and laughed their missionaries to scorn. Many things which were especially daring said Wong Chin Foo to the startled Bostonians. He held up before their startled eyes a panorama of the doctrines of Confucius, and with pride alluded to the fact that a stern observance of the five cardinal principles of that revered Celestial—viz. gravity, propriety, sincerity, virtue, and filial love—had allowed the Chinese to maintain themselves as they had for two thousand years. Nothing that Wong Chin Foo said, wrote the reporters, indicated any deviation on his part from Chinese ideas, or any desire to propitiate his hearers by yielding to their beliefs or working upon their prejudices. Evidently not; for this patriotic aristocrat defended to the uttermost the custom of placing idols in temples, and declared to the Boston audience, 'We worship God ten times zicer and quicker in this way than you can in your way.' He vaunted Chinese society as vastly more sincere, ingenious, and cultured than that of the United States and Europe. With a fine enthusiasm he described the Arcadian simplicity and kindness of the Chinese country-folk, among whom 'the cruelty, the barbarity, and the greediness of European and American had not penetrated, and with pride declared that in an Empire where four hundred and fifty millions of people were crowded together there were not so many murders annually as in our sparsely-settled country, containing forty millions. Finally, Wong Chin Foo extolled the retiring and modest disposition of the Chinese, and added that he was modest himself until he became inticed 'with civilization.' Though fatigued by the storm of politics in his native land, this Oriental refugee seems to have retained an unwavering love for and belief in the religion and society of the country of the Celestials, and he has begun an active missionary work here. He mourns over our incompleteness, our lack of repose and gravity, our profuse expenditure, our business greed, and our utter want of filial reverence. Nothing, he thinks, can lift us from our degradation but the religion of Confucius, which raised China, from a low and disturbed condition, and gave her so many centuries of brilliant peace. Wong Chin Foo earnestly expresses the hope that followers of the Chinese philosopher may, at once spring up here; and his audacity may yet result in a 'Confucius class,' into whose ranks young Boston may flock to listen to the teachings of the exiled aristocrat."

Drains.—"Practical Experience" writes to tell what he knows of Montreal drains. Owing to an insufferable odor in his house, a few weeks since, the floor was ripped up, when "it was discovered that the basement had become a cesspool of sewage. The city authorities promptly excavated the street and found that the main drain was completely choked; the plank of which it was composed, had rotted and both sides and top had succumbed to the pressure of the earth above it. The drain being opened we were relieved from the sewage, but a thorough examination revealed the fact that the drain pipes under the floor were laid together loosely without cement; apertures existed between each, through which water and air could freely exude. Cracks were found also in two places in the lead pipes, just below traps, owing to defective plumbing, so that the foul air had free vent through the crevices in spite of the water in the traps above. He had every pipe cemented, plumbed very carefully, and connected the drain-pipe in the second story with two inch zinc pipe which was carried into the chimney in the third story, making a draft for the free escape of the air. The results entirely satisfactory, and the expense was only one half of the doctor's bill for his previous six months."—Witness AMNESTY.—We notice that the London Times advocates the commutation of the sentence of Lepine. It says:—"The political acts of the malcontents of Red River have been wholly forgiven; and the death of Scott was so inextricably associated with the political objects of the rebellion that statesmen cannot regard it as an ordinary murder. Lepine's death would add brutality to brutality, and stain the history of Canada with a blot which the children of those most crying for his execution would be ashamed of." It thus appears that not only is the feeling of the people of the Dominion of Canada favourable to an amnesty, but that in the Mother country a similar sentiment prevails, as expressed by the leading newspaper of the land.—Montreal Herald.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT THE NEW POST OFFICE.—Shortly before five o'clock Friday afternoon as Joseph Lapierre, carpenter engaged in finishing the woodwork over the dormer window of the north east end of the new post office was about retracing his steps along the parapet of the building his foot slipped and he fell violently to the ground a distance of upwards of 100 feet. A fellow workman immediately apprised the others who proceeded to the spot and picked him up, a mangled corpse. Dr. Beaubien was called who pronounced life extinct and notified the Coroner. Deceased is about forty years of age, and resided in Durham street, Quebec suburbs. He is reported as a very respectable hard working man, and leaves a wife and eight children almost unprovided for.

A PRECOCIOUS PRISONER.—Last night a homeless young man named John Foley went to the Ottawa street police station for protection. He was kindly taken in, and this morning when the officer in charge was about to release him, he, seeing by the snow that winter was at hand, was loath to leave. When he saw that the policeman could not be prevailed on by fair means to keep him he used foul, striking him, and breaking a window of the station, crying at the same time, "Now, you will have to put me in." Perhaps he will repent before he fulfils two months hard labor in jail, to which the Recorder sentenced him.

A FEW EVENINGS AGO, Mr. T. S. Brown, official assignee, was crossing the street, at the corner of Victoria Square and St. Bonaventure street, when a cart drove furiously past knocking him down. All he recollects is that he was struck with something, and that he heard the tramp of horses' feet. He was picked up, put in a carriage, and sent home, where he has been obliged to remain since. His ankle is badly hurt. This fast driving is becoming a nuisance, and persons guilty of it cannot too vigorously be prosecuted.

IT IS REPORTED IN THE French papers that the Paris Rappet of 16th October last acknowledges receipt of a harrowing letter, signed by 172 French residents of Montreal, setting forth their pitiable condition from want of work, and means of subsistence. The object of the letter is to induce the French Government to assist them to return to France, and the Rappet hopes the Minister of Foreign Affairs will comply with their request.

CARELESS DRIVING.—Now that snow has fallen the time of accidents caused by careless driving has arrived. Last evening a lady at the corner of Dorchester and Bloor street was nearly run over through the extreme carelessness and stupidity of a cart.

MANY FRENCH CANADIAN labourers have left the farms and workshops of Vermont lately on account of reduction in wages. They find more encouragement at home.

QUEBEC, Nov. 21.—It appears very probable that a boy, lately deserted here by a Canadian woman, apparently hailing from the United States, will turn out to be the stolen child Charles Ross. The woman has been ill at the Marine Hospital almost a month. She owns the child is not her own, but was found in the street of some city she refused to name. The boy was found by Detective Skellington and Bolger. His photograph was taken and compared with that provided for his search, with which it corresponded. It was forwarded to Allen Pinkerton, the celebrated detective.

PROPOSED RAILWAY SUBSCRIPTION.—QUEBEC, Nov. 23.—The subject of the proposed subscription by this city of $100,000 in aid of the Lake St. John Railway, is to come before the City Council in Committee to-morrow evening. At the last meeting of the Council the opinion of the members seemed unanimous in favor of granting the proposed aid, the only question being as to the mode in which the Company propose to continue the line to the Lake after the completion of the first section to St. Raymond.

VESSEL SEIZED.—The bark "Hattie M." arrived down from Montreal yesterday, bound for Callao, with a cargo of sawn lumber, exchanged pilots and was ready to proceed, when a Sheriff's officer with a party of police seized the vessel upon behalf of the St. Lawrence Steam Navigation Company for the sum of $584.48 for towage. They also arrested the Captain and brought him ashore. Dowell & Powell gave $700 as a security until the case should be tried in court. Capt. Eaton disputes the case, as he states that he offered the full amount of the ship's indebtedness to the company's agent in Montreal previous to his departure. The vessel proceeded on her voyage early this morning.

THE TIMBER TRADE.—The almost complete stagnation which has characterized the trade in our chief staple during the past two seasons, it is as might be expected, producing serious results in almost every quarter from the chancier man upwards to the manufacturer and the shipper. Large numbers of men have been thrown out of employment by the imperative necessity of manufacturers restricting their operations; and it is estimated that a loss of fully five millions of dollars has been sustained by the country in this brief period of two years owing to the falling off in our lumber business. Our own share of loss here in Quebec is set down at a million and a half, and it appears that we are not at all of our difficulties in the connection yet. We regret to hear that a rumor, almost amounting to a certainty, has been in circulation in St. Peter for the past few days to the effect that one of our most respectable firms in the timber trade has failed. It is needless to add that this rumor has excited much surprise and sympathy; as the principal has been long known for his energy and enterprise. We may be permitted to add our own sincere hope that his embarrassments will be only temporary.—Quebec Budget.

We are requested by Mr. Egan to publish the following:—"Last Spring, Mr. John McGuigan, of Woodstock, was cured by the 'Water of Lourdes' of a sore leg. For thirteen years previous to his cure he had suffered, and all the doctors in town were unable to cure his leg, which had four or five running sores on it. The leg is sound now and Mr. McGuigan is most thankful to God and his Immaculate Mother."—M. A. BEAN.

—The Woodstock Weekly Review, Nov. 13. His Honor the Mayor recently received from Mr. Mann S. Valentia, Richmond, Va., three dozen bottles of his meat juice for the use of the small-pox hospital. He gave it to the Medical Officers of Health who sent it to the small-pox hospital. The nurses find it a valuable preparation.—Witness.

SMALL-POX.—There are at present thirty small-pox patients in the small-pox hospital, and if the number increase to any great extent it is expected that further accommodation will be rendered necessary. The English Hospital also contains ten sufferers from the same disease.

STARTED TO KEEP HOUSE.—Nice little warm boxes with straw nests have been put up in the Champ de Mars for the sparrows, which at once took possession and set up housekeeping for the winter.

BREAKFAST—EPPS'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills."—Civil Service Gazette.
