

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

Points on the Training of Young Girls—Housework Healthful—The Importance of Tight Shoes—A Risky Adventure—Varieties.

Three Periods of Love.

I.
Sighing like a furnace,
Over ears in love,
Blind in adoration
Of this lady's glove.
Thinks no girl was ever
Quite so sweet as she,
Till you are an angel,
Keeps you to agree.

II.
Moping and repining,
Gloomy and morose,
Asks the price of poison,
Thinks he'll take a dose.
Women are so fickle,
Love is all a sham,
Marriage is a failure,
Like a broken dam.

III.
Whistling, blythe and cheerful,
Always bright and gay,
Dancing, singing, laughing,
All the lovely day.
Full of fun and frolic,
Caught in fashion's whirl,
Thinks no more of poison,
Got another girl.

The Training of Girls.

A recent writer on the training of girls says: "When a girl is ten years old she should be given household duties to perform according to her size and strength, for which a sum of money should be paid her weekly. She should have a little pocket money, and the knowledge how to spend it judiciously, and can so well be given by a mother to her little girl. She should be required to furnish a part of her wardrobe with this money. For instance, if she gets ten cents a week, she should purchase all her stockings, or all her gloves, as her mother may decide; and in this under the mother's supervision she will learn to trade with judgment and economy.

"Of course the mother will see to it that the sum is sufficient to do this, and yet leave a trifle for the child to spend as she pleases. This will supply a healthy stimulus; it will give her a proper ambition and pride in her labor and the ability to use money properly. As she grows older these household duties should be increased, with the proportionate increase of money paid for the performance of them.

"We know of a lady who divided the wages of a servant among her three daughters. Their is a systematic arrangement of their labor, which is done with thoroughness and alacrity rarely found, either with a hired girl or a daughter who feels that she has to do it with nothing to encourage or stimulate her in her work."

Housework Healthful.

Housework is healthy, and many physicians recommend it to women who need exercise. Walking is not enough; it exercises only the legs, while dusting and sweeping bring an entirely different set of muscles into play. Many girls take more interest in their homes if encouraged to assist in the care of them. And, perhaps, this was an idea of Mrs. Donald G. Mitchell, who brought up all of her daughters to do a part of the domestic work of their homes. Some mothers are willing to give their daughters an allowance for doing this work, dividing between them what would be the wages of a servant. This, of course, would be an inducement for a girl who had no taste for housework, and would enable her to gratify many little personal wants. It seems, too, only just, unless the family is in straitened circumstances, that the daughters should receive what would otherwise be paid to a servant. Household duties, if properly planned, need take but very little time out of a long day. To be systematic in the discharge of such duties is the only way to properly accomplish the right amount of work.—Boston Herald.

Beautiful Feet.

Good judgment in the selection of shoes has more to do with the preservation of the usefulness as well as the beauty of the feet than anything else. Some girls have a very poor conception of what is really beautiful in a foot. Take, for instance, the girl who seeks to make the foot look shorter than it really is. She wears a shoe calculated to further this purpose. The result is, the foot becomes broad and thick and resembles a ball or club more than anything else. And when the foot is bare it looks like a cramped mass of shrunken bones and muscle. The usefulness of the foot, also, is destroyed in this manner; it becomes tender, and subject to corns and bunions, and a walk of any distance is invariably attended with discomfort. It is a noteworthy fact that the richest ladies and the recognized leaders of fashion in New York wear the most sensible, though perhaps the most expensive, shoes.

A Risky Adventure.

Miss Beekie Johnson, a very pleasing and attractive school teacher, living near St. Thomas, Penn., went to Carlisle a few days ago, and at the railroad station met a man whom she had never seen before. In an hour they were husband and wife. The groom is John Demaree, of Rushville, Ill., who came all the way to wed his unknown bride, and the wedding involved an interesting story of courtship in long range. Some time ago Miss Johnson made the acquaintance of Miss Maggie Jenkins, who was visiting near the home of this "school marm." A strong friendship sprang up, and when Miss Jenkins left for her western home she carried with her Miss Johnson's sincere affection and one of her photographs, but it was to the latter that Miss Johnson is indebted for her present husband. Mr. Demaree chanced to see the picture, and was then and there smitten. A correspondence was arranged by Miss Jenkins and the marriage was finally brought about. The meeting and ceremony took place at Carlisle, away from the prying eyes of curious neighbors who had heard of the remarkable affair.

Varieties.

L'Industrie Parisienne says that in some French laundries boiled potatoes are preferred to soap for the cleansing of soiled linen. Little Princess Wilhelmina, heir to the Dutch throne, has mastered Dutch and German, and is now diligently studying French. The Queen of Italy is growing stout, to her great distress. She has several times tried to become a vegetarian, in hope of reducing her weight, but is too fond of good living to persevere in such a course.

The Duchess of Rutland is one of the most active women in England. She opens bazaars, attends Temperance meetings, inaugurates clubs, sings at concerts, and makes a large number of speeches.

Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, says his daughter is about as skilled in the law as he is. She acts as his amanuensis and advice with him when doubtful legal points arise. Such a daughter is a jewel in the parental crown.

Twelve women inspectors in the New York Custom House have been discharged, leaving only ten. The places of the twelve will be occupied by men. The change was made because ladies objected to women inspectors tumbuling their baggage.

Some wealthy women who are heads of families have contributed a fund for the establishment in New York of a school for the training of respectable young women as nurses for infants. This is in the line of true benevolence.

"George Sand's" granddaughter, Miss Aureole Dudaunt, is about to be married to a painter—M. Lauth. Her father, M. Maurice Sand, died some months ago. M. Dudaunt, who bears the full name of her illustrious grandmother, is also remarkably like "George Sand" in appearance.

The best evidence of progress in Georgia is the recent Act of the Legislature establishing a training school for girls, in which they are to be inducted into all the mysteries of housekeeping, cooking, sewing and the numberless accomplishments that add to the comforts of the home.

Clara Louise Kellogg is the first lady to carry a Toca cane in New York. The cane is made of light wood, is about five feet long, and has a chased silver top. A few inches from the top a hole is drilled through the wood, and this is decorated with a light silk cord and tassels. Toca canes used in the mountains as a pestoosks have an excuse for being, but in the streets of a city they can hardly be considered a necessity.

The way in which Rosa Bonheur was invested with the Cross of the Legion of Honor is somewhat interesting. Fontainebleau, where the artist was living, was one of the favorite summer residences of Napoleon III., and one day the Empress thought she would like to make the artist's personal acquaintance. With this end in view she paid an impromptu call, and stayed some time watching Rosa Bonheur at work. She was so impressed by the painter's talent that she begged the Emperor to bestow the Cross of the Legion of Honor upon her. But it was not to be. The Cross had never been given to a woman, and the Ministers protested against a precedent. But the Empress bided her time till the following year, when, during the absence of the Emperor in Algeria, she acted as Regent. One morning a servant hurriedly entered Rosa Bonheur's studio with the announcement that the Empress was below. In another minute she was in the studio borrowing a pin from one of her ladies. The Empress then kissed the artist, who, glancing down, saw the Legion d'Honneur pinned on her breast.

If You Have Company.

Don't overdo for company.

Don't do anything merely to show them and give them your best, but do it without parade.

If you have only plain crockery and pewter spoons, then the whiteness of the tablecloth and the freshness of the napkins, and especially the cordial welcome, is all that is necessary.

If dancing be the evening's amusement, a hostess should be sure that every one is provided with a partner before she herself accepts one. If games are the order of the evening, let her see to it that every one is drawn into the fun.

If a visitor stands alone, quickly, before there is a chance for him to feel awkward, go yourself to talk with him, or ask some one else to do so.—Harper's Young People.

Germany's African Policy.

BERLIN, November 27.—In the Reichstag today Herr Richter, speaking on the colonial estimates, maintained that spirit and ammunition were the principal articles imported by Togo, which territory, he said, was the haunt of emigrants and slave traders. Dr. Knaebel, councillor of the Imperial chancellery, controverted Richter's attempt to show that the colony was valueless. Herr Wurmman said the German trade with West Africa was developing rapidly, and would have a great future. In discussing the appropriation asked for to increase the native protection forces in Southwest Africa, Count Herbert Bismarck said Captain Francois held a good position, but it was necessary to strengthen it. Commissioners, he said, had tried in vain to enroll a sufficient native force. The rebels were accurately informed of outside occurrences, and there was no doubt that the utterances of the German press and the speeches made in the Reichstag had an influence upon them. The four German companies and many independent German colonists in Southwest Africa require protection. Herr Bismarck opposed the proposed grant, and the debate was adjourned.

What Educates?

You ask what will educate your son? Your daily example will educate him; your conversation with your friends; the likings and dislikes he sees you express; the business he sees you transact—these will surely educate him. The society you live in will educate him; your domestic circle will educate him; above all, your rank, your situation in life, your table will educate him. It is not in your power to withdraw him from the continual influence of these things except you were to withdraw yourself from every time; you can neither stop it nor turn its course. What these have a tendency to make your child, that he will be. Parents should invariably give good example to their children, for youths are usually apt students, and impressions made in childhood are indelibly stamped upon the susceptible mind.

Some Important "Don'ts"

Don't be a fool.
Don't backbite your neighbor.
Don't fall out with friends for trifles.
Don't stare at people or laugh at any peculiarities of dress or manner.
Don't use profane or obscene language. It is not only sinful, but extremely vulgar.
Don't speak ungrammatically. Study books of grammar, and works of the best authors.
Don't fail to apologize if you stumble against any one, or inconvenience one in any way.
Don't neglect your hands, and above all, avoid carrying blackened finger nails. Be neat in all things.
Don't fail to consider the feelings of others under all circumstances—that is the first principle of good behavior.
Don't pronounce incorrectly. Listen carefully to the conversation of cultivated people, and consult the dictionaries.

The disagreeable sick headache, and foul stomach, so frequently complained of, can be speedily relieved by a single dose of McGALE'S Bitternutt Pills.
