

the subject shall, not later than the fifth sitting day of the House following the filing of the motion, in accordance with the rules of the House, unless a motion to the House has been earlier taken up and considered in the other House, take up and consider the motion.

(4) A motion taken up and considered in accordance with subsection (3) shall be debated without interruption for not more than five hours and on the conclusion of each debate or at the expiry of the fifth day after the Speaker of the House of Commons or the Speaker of the Senate may, at any further time, without further debate or amendment, put every question necessary for the disposal of the motion.

(5) A motion taken up and considered in accordance with subsection (3) shall be debated without interruption for not more than five hours and on the conclusion of each debate or at the expiry of the fifth day after the Speaker of the House of Commons or the Speaker of the Senate may, at any further time, without further debate or amendment, put every question necessary for the disposal of the motion.

(6) Within the first fifteen days after the receipt by the House of a motion pursuant to subsection (3) the House of Commons shall, in the opinion of the Speaker, take up and consider the motion unless the motion has already been taken up and considered in the other House.

(7) Where a motion taken up and considered in accordance with this section is introduced by the House of Parliament in which it was introduced and is concerned in which the motion relates shall stand revised but without prejudice to the making of a further motion of a like nature to implement a subsequent supplementary convention between the Government of Canada and the Government of

(8) Within the first fifteen days after the receipt by the House of a motion pursuant to subsection (3) the House of Commons shall, in the opinion of the Speaker, take up and consider the motion unless the motion has already been taken up and considered in the other House.

(9) Within the first fifteen days after the receipt by the House of a motion pursuant to subsection (3) the House of Commons shall, in the opinion of the Speaker, take up and consider the motion unless the motion has already been taken up and considered in the other House.

(10) Within the first fifteen days after the receipt by the House of a motion pursuant to subsection (3) the House of Commons shall, in the opinion of the Speaker, take up and consider the motion unless the motion has already been taken up and considered in the other House.

(11) Where a motion taken up and considered in accordance with this section is introduced by the House of Parliament in which it was introduced and is concerned in which the motion relates shall stand revised but without prejudice to the making of a further motion of a like nature to implement a subsequent supplementary convention between the Government of Canada and the Government of

(12) Where a motion taken up and considered in accordance with this section is introduced by the House of Parliament in which it was introduced and is concerned in which the motion relates shall stand revised but without prejudice to the making of a further motion of a like nature to implement a subsequent supplementary convention between the Government of Canada and the Government of

11

12

13

14