WOMEN PROMINENT IN NEW PROGRAM

Will Take Large Part in This Year's Canadian National Exhibition.

"It has been a revelation to me the are engaged," said John G. Kent, gen manager of the Canadian Nanal Exhibition. "Even the best intional Exhibition. "Even the best informed of our directors have been amazed at the many branches of service that now occupy women."

That woman is surely coming into her own is evidenced in many aspects of the exhibition this year. The large display posters this year picture a woman, in the primitive act of sowing seed by hand. Over her are the words "Produce and Save." Thruout the program, woman in war service, both production by helping the farmer, and conservation, saving for the soldier, has taken a very large place. In the actual carrying out of the program, woman will again be to the fore, For the first time there is to be a day set apart as Woman's Day. Into every phase of the exhibition has the woman spirit permeated. Ticket selling, ticket taking and gatekeeping will, in all probability, be done by women. The authorities of the exhibition are not sure yet whether or not all these women officials will be unformed, but the matter is under consideration.

In the day's program almost all the fields will have women doing the work usually done by men. Demonstrations with the cattle and horses by the farm help girls, the "farmerets," are being

"The women are over-running the exhibition this year," said Joe Hay. "We are learning daily what they can, what they will, and what they want to do in connection with it."
