railway switch on Horton street on Tuesday.

The coach had been stopped because it was caught in a rut and in order that the funeral would not be stopped the driver of the hearse attempted to turn out. He drove into a high bank, expecting that the wheels would sink into the snow. The snow would not give way, and the hearse went over. The casket was thrown over and the top came off. The body was thrown upon the cover of the casket. No damage was done to the hearse, which was quickly righted, permitting the funeral to proceed.
