lockjaw antitoxin at the time of injury, lockjaw has been reduced to a minimum.

How much a part the automobile has played in this new sanitary science has not yet been announced. Yet it is more than a coincidence that lockjaw has lessened all the year around and that tetanus bacillus, the cause of lockjaw, is known to abide in manure and other street dirt and garden earth, which the advent of the automobile has driven into limbo.

Horses, mules, refuse piles and city stables may not yet be things of the word, but they have so far disappeared that lockjaw germs, stable files, houseflies, glanders and other pests which invade, infest and infect man from stables, hostlers and stall boys that the distributed.
