Mystery of Harry L. Williams' Death Deepens With Investigation

Several Persons Within Short Distance of Murdered Man at Time Deed Was Committed But No One Heard Fatal Shot—Police Straining Every Effort to Unravel the Mystery—Curious Crowds Flock to Scene of Tragedy

The mystery which enshrouds the death of Harry L. Williams, a well-known and popular young grocer and butcher of the north end, who was found murdered last night in his store at the corner of Elm and Main streets, is still unsolved. Despite the most careful scrutiny of the premises, close questioning of people residing near the scene, and methods of deduction used by the police, no evidence was disclosed this morning which would give a clue to the possible murderer.

Another theory is that some person was possibly hiding behind the store in the front store, and was either detected or attempted to make his get-away when caught sight of. If a person so caught was holding an automatic pistol in his hand the slightest pressure of the finger would cause the weapon to be discharged, realising the horror of his deed he never waited to rifle either cash drawer or safe.

Believed Irrelevant Mrs. John Wilkins, who resides at 410 Main street, and who claims to have heard a cry out: "Help! For God's sake will somebody help me?" was interviewed by Times reporter this morning. Her statements, however, did not seem to warrant that the cry had any connection with the murder. She said she was sitting in her kitchen when she heard a choking cry, and then the cry. She thought the sound came from Murray street. At the store is situated a considerable distance from her home, it seems improbable that the cry came from there and was not heard by people residing upstairs, and also in the neighboring houses. Again, the fact that the bullet entered the brain is evidence that Mr. Williams was killed instantly and that he never uttered a sound after being hit.

FRANK CRITICISM OF NEW CABINET German Press of Various Shades of Opinion Does Not Attempt to Conceal Dissatisfaction With New Members

Copenhagen, Aug. 8.—A feature of the shake-up in the German cabinet is the consideration shown by the Catholic Centre party, whose demand for representation in the new cabinet and at the failure to the Roman Catholic population was recognized by the appointment of three Roman Catholics, Spahn, Walfisch and Kuehlmann. With a revocation of the anti-Jewish and Polish expropriation laws, also part of the Cabinet programme, that party is considered to have done very well as a result of the parliamentary crisis.

This advance is part of 100,000,000 yen loan which will probably be secured by surplus revenue on the salt monopoly, the terms of which are to be agreed upon by the Allies. The loan temporarily relieves the financial pressure on the Peking government.
