Ost every diplomatic or consuler mission in Riga has at least one princess or countess working as a typist.

If the supply of princesses and countesses fail, there remains a large number of other well-educated people, most of them unaccustomed to work, but now anxious to do anything to save them from starvation.

EVAPORATED

The condition of the infant Baltic states shows how complete has been the financial downfall of tae Russian nobility. In Riga, Reval and other Baltic towns, princes, barons and counts and their families, accustomed for decades in Russia to lives of luxury, are living a hand-to-mouth existence. The possessions which they once had and that escaped confiscation by the Bolsheviki clutter up the shelves of second hand dealers in taese cities. Diamonds, other jewels, fine tapestries and the countless costly nick-nacks of a luxurious civilization have been sold by these refugees—all members of the old Russian or Baltic nobility. Some of these refugees—all members of the old Russian or Baltic nobility. Some of the more fortunate had saved their evening clothes. They were in sharp contract to those that had not.

Here and there were men in coats of women as variously clad—some chic, in latest modes, some in shirtwaists and skirts; still others in frocks so obviously homemade or remade that the poorest shopgirl in New York would sniff at them.

The casual stranger dropping into Riga or Reval for a day or two would never find this poverty. Instead, he would find cafes, open all night, where foreigners, lucky because of the low rates of Lavtvian or Esthonian exchange, and local profiteers, tossed fat bankrolls of almost worthless rubles or marks to waiters who count only in hundreds or thomsands. thousands.

fluently English. Russian and German and with some knowiedge of Lettish, received 51 replies by mail. The corridor before his room in the hotel was filled with men and women seeking to apply personally for the position. Most of them were so well educated that they could qualify not only in the four languages mentioned, but in others as well.

They were either out of work, or receiving such small pay in their present employment that they were anxious to change.

Among the applicants were a former colonel in one of the most aristocratic Petrograd guard regiments, a dozen other former officers, two men who had been managers of big Russian factories, and many other well-educated people.

Oak Hall's Store-Wide Sale

That Will Continue All This Week

By store-wide sale we do not mean that everything throughout our entire store is marked at sale prices. It does mean, however, that every department throughout the store is offering many lines of fresh, seasonable merchandise at greatly lowered prices.

Those who have already taken advantage of this opportunity realize that it is not an attempt to clear out old merchandise or get rid of high priced stocks. We thoroughly cleaned house some months ago, got our stocks down below normal and then replenished with fresh, new merchandise at rock bottom prices. And this is what is being offered at this store-wide sale. It will pay you to take every possible advantage of this opportunity.

The same qualities you've been seeing at $20 and $25. Snappy, boyish models, excellent, hard wearing materials.
