r.A.W. CHASE KIDNEY.

DISEASE

Scores and thousands of grateful men and women have been rescued from the miseries, and dangers of kidney disease by this greatest of all kidney cures.

Mr. D. C. Simmons, Mabee, Ont., writes.

"My kidneys and back were so bad I was unable to work or sleep. My urine had sediment like brick dust, I was compelled to get up four or five times during the night. I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised and concluded to give them a trial. I have only used one box and am completely cured. I was a great sufferer for 18 years, but my kidneys do not bother me now. I enjoy good rest and sleep and consider Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills a boon to suffering humanity.

for service. Here is his description of a fight for leadership between two buffalo males:

"With muzzles lowered, pawing the earth with their great boofs, raising impaipable dust from the hard, dry sod over which millions of their compers have trodden for centuries, they cautiously circle around each other." measuring every possible vaniage. Their great heads, matted with 'bull nettles' and sand burs' until twice their normal size, are alternalely tossed high in the air, then as quickly lowered until their noses come within an inch of the ground. These are the preliminary tarties that gauge the battle, like the knights of old when they threw their gaunties of steel into the arena. Their short tufted tails are swollen as a cat when in the existacy of its rage; their backs curved up like the same pugnacious animal, and their hair bristling with the desire for battle. "Now, when near enough to each other, comes the supreme moment for which they have been waiting—their eyes seem to pour ferth livid rays like that emanating from an electric dynamo, as they charge upon each other with the rush of a tornade at the height of its fury. Their short horns look with the rattle that sounds like the firing of a battali in directly over where they stand in their mighty struggis. The spectator is apparently almost 'paralyzed by the display of energy and exertion of muscle shown by the huge beasts, as he breathlessly waits for a lull in the terrible condict which has completely entranced him.

"The fight always continues," goes on the steer "typeti one of the contestant."

"The fight always continues," goes on the story, "until one of the contestants is conquered. Even then the conquered animal always keeps his face to the victor, moving backward until an opportunity offers itself for him to skulk into seclusion or out of sight of his now seknowledged master."

"Buffalo Jones" is a native of Illinois, where his grandfather was counted among the pioneers. The father, a famous hunter, shot not only for sport but for the food to keep his grawing family. It was the lessons learned in the company of this father chasing the deer, beaver, wolves and other "varminis" of the wild country about that "Buffalo Jones" found his best knowledge for the work adopted in after years. I he genius for taming animals seemed bern in this hunter and he became an expert in this particular, having unusual chance for practice in the vast herds of cattle placed under his supervision while yet in his teens.

For the pioneer father had grown rich in lands and animals and the son's delight was to tring the wildest of the brutes into subjection to his will. While a mere child he captured squirrels and rattlesmakes, extracting the fangs of the latter, and made many precious dollars that preventions made after one of the awful blizzads that prompted with the fall of the words. The many and often the fall of the words of the sorm, itself and his own escape from its terffors he thus sums up the reasons which the wandering in the immediate dars following forced upon his consideration. on the way home—for which he started shortly afterward—young Spoonamore, with a hopelessily puzzled look on his tace, was trying to figure out how that could possibly be.

The Giri's wound Logic.

An Irish priest was walking to chapel meditating on the temptations of his people, when three young women of his parish passed him. He knew them to be well-meaning, diffident girls, and became somewhat alarmed on seeing that a gentleman noted for sceptical tendencies stopped to speak to them. He therefore quickened his steps in order to hear the conversation, and immediately snatch any skeptical teaching from the ininds of his parishioners. After listening to the following, however, he felt that furtiler remarks were superfluous: "Good morning, girls. Is it to the chapel you're going? What harm'll come to you if you stay at home? I haven't been to chapel in two years, and I weigh 200 pounds this day." And one of the three answered: "You haven't been to chapel in two years, yer say, and yer weighs 200 pounds. Sure me father has a jacksasthat never went to chapel in his life, and he weighs 400 pounds! Bates ye holler!" The Girl's Sound Logic.

Dickens and the Children.

Dickens and the Children,
Writing in The Century on Charles Dickens interest in the cause of sducation. Mr. James J. Hughes concludes his article by saying:
He was the first great English student of Froebel. He deals with 19 different schools in his books. He gives more attention to the training of childhood than any other novelist, or any other educator tention to the training of childhood than any other novellat, or any other educator except Frachel. He was one of the first Englishmen to demand national control of education, even in private schools, and the thorough training of all teachers. He exposed 14 types of coorcion, and did more than any one size to lead Christian men and women to treat children humanely. Every book he wrote except two is rich in educational thought. He took the most advanced position on every phase of modern educational thought, except manual, training. When he is thoroughly understood he will be recognised as the Froebel of England.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Waskita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrufula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved, that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, bolls and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps: digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by A. I. McCail & Co. Druggists, Guaranteed.
