French Fractions.

As the time for the meeting of the French Assembly draws near all parties begin to prepare for the struggle that is to take place over the proposition for the definitive establishment of the form of government. The supporters of the monarchical element is avowedly temporary the monarchical factions are contented to bide their time, but now that a determined effort is to be made to ground that form in the fundamental law of the land the monarchists deem it their time to strike. The Legitimist and Bourbon factions seem to be no nearer reconciliation than during the empire—in fact, not so near—and their differences will considerably weaken their chances, would vote for the monarchy, if there were only one claimant for the throne, who would not plunge the country into another dynastic struggle. The Legitimist calls upon the Chief Executive to accept the provisional dictatorship long and wearily, and with moderation and firmness to bring the country to the Rio Grande, and will move as day to protect our rights and interests on the Rio Grande, and will move as fast as a just regard for a weak and unfortunate neighbor will permit. In all this he has an adviser, and co-operator in Secretary Fish, who kept pace with his own wishes and policy."

A Monday's Berlin dispatch gives the following particulars of the legislative troubles now agitating the German capital:

"There is a conflict between the Upper and Lower Houses on the Prussian Diet on the County Reform Bill. Prussian provides local self-government the rural districts. The bill, which was adopted by the Chamber of Deputies in the last session, came before the House of Lords at the beginning of the present session, and has since met determined opposition. The majority of the Lords is said to be unfriendly to the bill, and the Emperor has declared in favor of it. The President of the House of Lords was received yesterday by the Emperor, who spoke to him about the deadlock in the Diet and insisted that the Lords should bring it to an end by passing the measure without amendment and not aggressive. Senator Adrian, who is to act in ultimate personal relations with President Grant, but a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and ought to know something about the policy of the Department of State, in an article on the Mexican question, says:

"This, however, we do know, that in relation to all questions that are likely to arise out of our relations with Spain there is a certain coyness from the Upper Chamber, &c. One of the wealthy lumber merchants in that region noticed that the cream daily supplied to the table had gradually got thinner, until it was hardly worth a shilling per quart. The trouble in most of families was that they had too many and couldn't get rid of them. But now it is hardly possible to procure domestic help. The following domestic scene ensued:

Head of the household—Susan, I think you give us nothing but skim milk and the other girls.

Susan—Well, sposin' we do: I guess we are those who does the most work should be the best fed: now then" and with a saucy whisk of the head she left the room."

Considerable ill feeling is growing out of the hostile tariff measures adopted by the French and United States Governments, the result of which will, instead of increasing the carrying trade of either country, as anticipated, give much of their trade to the ships of Great Britain and Germany. At Havre, the quays are crowded with vessels bound for the United States, but ship owners refuse to let them sail in consequence of the ten per cent. increase of duty imposed by the United States on goods imported in French bottoms.

The great Herald of New York used utmost contempt, and occasionally rehearses some happy frame of mind now. But just at this time it feels about to try the effect of cayenne pepper upon a suffering steed, and, in order to better blow the fiery dust into the anti-Exchange man, Saturday. He was mouth of it, or is jealous of its power over the metropolitan money markets. It says: "This malicious colonial institution—the Bank of Montreal. It is afraid of it, or is jealous of its power everything but contempt for one colonial institution—the Bank of Montreal. It thus derange business, for the purpose of affecting the exchanges and to profit by the operation. Surely the banks and capitalists of this great metropolis can find resources enough to checkmate the adventurers of this colonial speculator, though he is ready to cross the border with five millions of gold in his carpet bag."

A Monday's London dispatch says that the Queen has appointed Lord Lyttleton to be Governor of Madras, and Lord Napier of Magdala to be Governor of Bombay. Lord Napier is a distinguished officer, and has been long in the service of India. He commanded the Abyssinian expedition, and has been mentioned in dispatches for gallant conduct in the field. He was about 38 years of age, of late employed in Malta, and has a wife and family.

An unknown man, about 50 years old, while walking on the track of the Lowell and Nashua Railroad, Saturday, was struck by the down passenger train and instantly killed.

The Sunday law in Chicago brought out the following notices from saloon proprietors last Sabbath: "No hypocrisy here—we are pious on Sunday"; and "Positively closed: gone to the Little Church around the Corner."

Last week a colored woman, aged 91, died in Brooklyn and was buried. Among the mourners was her husband, Cæsar, aged 97. Her loss made him inconsolable, and he died four days after her grief.

The wife of Napoleon Bonaparte Davis, of East Saginaw, Mich., had her husband arrested for assault and battery because he took away from her the shot-gun with which she was proposing to perforate him. The Department of State, in an article on the Washington Chronicle, says:

"There are probably many deputies who would vote for the monarchy, if there were only one claimant for the throne, who would not plunge the country into another dynastic struggle. The Legitimist calls upon the Chief Executive to accept the provisional dictatorship long and wearily, and with moderation and firmness to bring the country to the Rio Grande, and will move as day to protect our rights and interests on the Rio Grande, and will move as fast as a just regard for a weak and unfortunate neighbor will permit. The Miseries of Mistresses.

In old days, when domestics were treated as members of the family, when the performance of menial offices for the master was not felt to be any more degrading than tenderly attentions to the sick king, when, in short, every household had a mistress to rule, there was no difficulty in obtaining servants. The trouble in most old families was that they had too many and couldn't get rid of them. But now it is hardly possible to procure domestic help. The following domestic scene ensued:

Head of the household—Susan, I think you give us nothing but skim milk and the other girls.

Susan—Well, sposin' we do: I guess we are those who does the most work should be the best fed: now then" and with a saucy whisk of the head she left the room."

Grant's Foreign Policy.

The interest in the coming Presidential election has entirely died out since all doubt was removed by the October contest, and the future policy of President Grant with respect to Cuba and Mexico is the subject of much speculation. Now that the Alabama Claims question, and Fishery disputes are settled to a satisfactory extent it is believed General Grant is free to devote his attention to the foreign affairs of the world would have gone mad with joy at the news
