

'Our foe is generous as brave, nor will our faith betray,
He'll never make New France a slave, though victor in the fray;
This night I spend the last on earth, communing with my God,
The morrow's sun will bring me birth within his high abode;