

Central Square to become controlled flea-market

By IVAN BOYSKI

York University has granted exclusive rights to Everything Trading Inc. to expand Central Square into a controlled flea-market.

According to York provost Tommy Baker, the decision came in response to student complaints of outrageous Central Square prices on goods and services.

Baker said, "The university and CYSF unanimously agreed that through expansion, more competitive market would be created and prices will fall accordingly."

Vice-president of Everything Trad- ing, Boris Balbeshnikov, was overjoyed when he learned that York had agreed to the expansion.

"Our company is going to transform Central Square into a shopper's dream world," said Balbeshnikov.

Balbeshnikov said that he plans to increase the number of vendor stands around the Square, but decrease the actual size of each stand, thus creating more space.

"To speed up the perestroika reform process, by September we hope to implement a policy under which only vendors selling goods in excess of 1.5 lbs will be issues a stall," said Balbeshnikov. He added that all other merchants selling smaller items like watches, jewellery, cigars, T-shirts, and pharmaceutical goods will be issued London Fog rain coats, altered by Everything Trading to accommodate the products.

Rain coat adjustment manager Taylor Grabouski said that the rain coats will contain 22 inside and 11 outside pockets.

"With such a coat, the merchant is no longer bound to one spot in Central Square," explained Grabouski.

"The vendor can walk around campus, go into colleges, cafeterias, and even to classes."

Andrai Dealman, Everything Trading's York representative said that the vendor stalls will be rented at $15 a day and transportable coats for $5.

Dealman said that he believes that the Central Square flea-market can provide practical experience for York students wishing to test their new inventions, advertising or selling skills in a real-market situation.

The Central Square flea-market will be open weekly from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. and from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekends.

Cineplex buys Stedman Halls

By GEORGE LUCAS

Cineplex Odeon has purchased the Stedman Lecture Halls, upsetting many students.

In a historic financial arrangement, the huge movie company is planning to turn York into a show business empire.

"The Force is with us," said Cineplex's CEO Darth Vaderbinsky. "Soon we will have the entire university within our grasp."

Vaderbinsky announced plans to turn Stedman into a huge theatre complex, with 34 theatres in each lecture hall.

"We will save one lecture hall," he reported in an exclusive interview, "where we will stage a special rendition of Phantom of the Opera."

Vaderbinsky said that admission prices will be low, at $2 per movie, with a special rate of $75 in scrip for Phantom of the Opera.

Many students are upset about the sale.

"What about my classes?" said Han Soleau, a third-year computer assisted math major. "Where will they be held? And why should I have to watch Dentyne commercials before my movies? Besides, my TV has a bigger screen!"

"I don't believe any of this Force shit," he continued, describing his plans to lead a rebellion against "the evil Vaderbinsky Empire." Soleau complained about "the fascist regime that runs York," but refused to comment on exactly how he would overcome the regime.

Vaderbinsky said he is considering using the building as a lecture hall between movies.

"We could hold classes as a form of intermission," he said. "It would give people a chance to eat their popcorn, and rest a bit." Vaderbinsky also emphasized that his THX Dolby Stereo Sound System could be used as an audio aid during lectures.

The new theatres will rival the best in the world, Vaderbinsky explained, and will be constructed in a matter of weeks.

"The seats are already in place," he said.

In our exclusive interview, Vaderbinsky revealed some of his plans to take over not only York, but the entire universe as well.

"Soon," he said, "the entire universe will be mine."

He plans to eventually use York as a base from which he will build a space station. Vaderbinsky will then use the station "to slowly blow up the solar system, planet by planet."

York president Harry Starstalker says he is aware of Vaderbinsky's plan.

"There is a grave disturbance in the Force," he said. "We're trying to turn him to the other side of the Force. Anger, Fear, Aggression... The dark side of the Force are they. Once you start down the dark path, forever will it dominate your destiny." Starstalker explained that Vaderbinsky followed the Dark path. "But he can be turned," he emphasized. "I feel the good in him."

Vaderbinsky has other plans. Being Starstalker's father, he would rather have his son on his side.

"If he could be turned, he would be a powerful ally," he explained. "If he joins me, we could rule the galaxy together, father and son."

TO ALL STUDENTS IN THE FACULTY OF ARTS

NEW ENROLMENT PROCEDURES FOR FW89

Remember: Before leaving the university for the summer, prepare for your enrolment in courses for the 1989/90 academic year. This year for the first time you will be enrolling by touch tone telephone after receiving your grade report.

1. Pick up your enrolment instructions and study list at the Office of Student Programmes, S321 Ross, if you have not already done so.
2. Read the instructions on the use of the Voice Response Enrolment System which are given in the first four pages of the Lecture Schedule.
3. Contact your major department or programme to get advising in preparation for course enrolment using the Voice Response Enrolment System. While advising is optional for many departments and programmes, it is strongly encouraged for students in all programmes and required by some (see the list on page 6 of the Advising and Enrolment Handbook).
4. Note that enrolling in courses is distinct from registration. You will not be registered until you have paid fees according to the instructions of the Registrar's Office.

You may try the Voice Response Enrolment System before enrolling yourself in courses this summer by calling 736-5400 to list your current FW 88 course selection.

If you have questions, call on the Advising Centre, S313 Ross (736-5022)

Best wishes for a pleasant summer.
