

The S

Blue-bill and Black-head are the common in North America these are qualified by the can distinguish between the two.

The larger species is common to the north and has a decidedly northern breeding range

The Southern breeding records of this d Southern British Columbia are all erroneous range covers the whole of the continent to the name of the Fall Duck with its smaller usually a good table bird, as it is on the Great requires to be in really good condition to be

On the bays and inlets of the Pacific the diet of shell-fish makes it uneatable; enormous one bothers them they can be studied at close

The lesser Scaup duck is confined to North wintering from the Southern Canadian border required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

