three months of quietude, the Japanese have resumed activity, attempting to force back the Russian right wing. A stubborn fight began Jan. 25 and is continuing to-day, Jan. 26, which may be a curtain raiser for the spring campaign. According to reports, the Japanese attack was repulsed and a Russian counter-attack was so energetically pressed that a village within the lower Japanese lines of strategical importance was taken. It is rumored that several Japanese guns were taken. There was no fighting at the centre or on the flanks. A bitterly cold wind is blowing, snow is falling and heavy frost prevails. e, Baffalo.

A Bed May Be a Thing of Beauty Though More Often It Is Not. Beds may come, and beds may go. but sleep goes on forever!

A bed may be a thing of beauty, but more often it is not. Many a house-wife is conscious that her bedsteads are a blot in an otherwise pretty room At night sleep begulles consciousness into oblivion, and the dream ship carries us off to pleasant harbors, remarks a writer in Boston Cooking School Magazine, some of whose clever ideas are here reproduced.

The simpler the framework of the bed the better, as long as this be con sistent with strength, and nothing cap be daintier or more cleanly than the chaste white iron bedstead with brass knobs. Brass rods fastened at the sides of the bed make a pretty addition. From them hang chintz curtains to within half an inch of the floor. Blue and white chintz is particularly pretty, and a blue and white bedspread carries on the idea. The pillows should be dispensed with during the day, the round belster being much preferred by up to date housewives as making the bed look neater. An effective cover for this bed's bolster is made of old time patchwork style—blue and white patches in square tile design. This cover is drawn in at the ends with blue silken cords. Its chaste simplicity will be its best recommendation. For a more elaborate bedstead poppy is a pretty fancy where red is chosen to predominate in the room, as the poppy flower is emblematic of sleep. A plain iron bedstead is painted green. Four iron uprights are attached to the four corners, with cross rods fastened at the top for valance curtains. This strangement of rods is a cheap addition to any bed that is not of itself pretty. The valance gives the suggestion of the old time canopy, with none of its hot, shut in disadvantages. The valance curtains are made of white material, with a broad band of red stitched at the bottom. Popples cut from the same red material are couched on the white cloth in clusters with black rope linen. A few heavy stitches of the same black easily make the cen-ter of the poppy. Green strips of cloth serve as stems. Curtains of the same design fall from rods at the side and foot of the bed to the floor. The mak-Cure.

A clever girl of my acquaintance made pretty an ugly bedstead with a superabundance not only of head-board, but of footboard as well. First board, but of footboard as well. First she painted the offending yellow wood a soft pale green, then cut from many seed catalogues great sprays of pic-tured pink roses, pasting the same in-clusters, leaves and all, here, there and everywhere over the head and foot of the bed. A coat of this varnish made them look like captured beauties form. June bushes, held there to dream about awhile. Small brass rods at the edges of the bed held simple white curtains with a broad border of pink gingham around the bottom.

In a healthy system consumption can't take root. But where there is weakness and debity, there you find tuberculosis. For developing strength and building up the weak, nothing equals Ferrozone. It makes the blood nutritious and the nerves enduring. The way it converts food into nutriment, the appetite it gives is surprising. Just what the man verging on consumption needs, —that's Ferrozone.
