FROM WASHINGTON.

CLOSE OF THE GREAT FAIR.

From our own Correspondent.

The ice of inaction has at last been broken, and liveliness has came to dwell with 18. The National Fair stirred into activity our latent energies, and the cold passivity which so long characterized the nation's Capital has given place to the vigor and warmth of life and youth. Even before the glories of the fair had faded from view and the echoes of its bustle had died away, the great Thomas Statue unveiling was announced to take place, and the glance of polished bayonets flashed back the dazzle of the skies and the tramp of martial numbers was heard in the land. The army of the Cumberland assembled here last Wednesday to honor the memory of their gallant commander, General George H. Thomas, and the nation was invited to take part in the celebration. Two weeks and more were given to preparation, and on the morning of the 19th the intelligent and active gentlemen who were conducting the movement, had brought to perfection manner of optical delicacies such as the country has not witnessed since the funeral of Lincoln.

The inaugural procession first claimed the attention of the multitudes, and the entusiasm and draw the applause of the desicplined troops awakened the enthusiasm and draw the applause of the dense surging mass of humanity stretched along the route of the procession. The next event in the programme were the ceremonies at the "Statue." This is a bronze east of Thomas seated on his horse, and stands on a massive pedestal in the centre of a large, beautiful circle. It closes eight broad vistas, and eight magnificance. Cannons and firearms were disposed appropriately around the statue, and before the concernance of every military significance. Cannons and frearms were disposed appropriately around the statue, and before the entry of the consecration and banners of every military significance. Cannons and frearms were disposed appropriately around the statue, and before the senting of the consecration than the consecration of the winding of the consecration than the consecration of the consecration of t banners of every military significance.

Cannons and firearms were disposed appropriately around the statue, and before the unveiling four large national flags were dropped about it. The ceremonies of the unveiling were very beautiful, consisting of prayer, music by the different bands, a hymnus by one hundred voices, orations, salutes and other tributes, worthy alike of the General's unboasted deeds and bril-

The closing chapter of the celebration The closing chapter of the celebration was the promenade concert and ball in the rotunda of the Capitol, and this was the loveliest chapter of them all. Never before had the National Capitol been put to such a use, but no other building in the city was able to accommodate the enormous crowds who wished to participate, and no grander hero than he in whose honor these marble halls were then thrown open, could have claimed the unusual privilege. The scene within was one open, could have claimed the unusual privilege. The scene within was one more beautiful than words can paint. The soft, sweet music of our far-famed band filled the old majestic hall with mystic melody, and elevating upward through the broad dreamy stretches of the dome, till broken in soft suggestive echoes, and in the lustrous sea of light and color there it least a charm to the gargeous and in the lustrous sea of light and color there, it lent a charm to the gorgeous scene and left impressions on the crowds below, which were better left to inauguration than to the bungling pen of the scribbler. And thus was given a fitting finale to the gorgeous celebration instituted in the honor of the noblest soldier of the week light and the scribble soldier. of the war. Washington, Nov. 21st, 1879. Vienna, November 29.—Tagblatt an-nounces that Mukhtar Pasha and a bodyguard of seventy men was massacred on 27th inst. by Arnauts.

NAPLES.

Paris, November 30.-Twenty-seven persons were dancing on the ground floor of a factory in course of construction at Foggia, Naples, when the two upper floors fell upon them. Seven persons have been extricated, but there is no hope of rescuing the others alive.

GERMANY.

Berlin, December 1.—Bismarck has written to the leaders of the National Liberals thanking them for their support of the Government on the railway question and expressing a hope that the former friendly relations may be renewed. The Clericals are much dissatisfied with this.

Clericals are much dissatisfied with this.

London, December 1.—A Berlin dispatch says Bismarck will probably arrive there on Thursday. It seems that negotiations between Bismarck and the Vatican have suddenly closed. As Bismarck will not agree to the restoration of the German bishops, there seems to be every probability that old struggles are recommencing.

FRANCE.

Paris, December 1 .- The Bureau of the Left has agreed upon the following points as the main part of their political points as the main part of their political programme: Liberty of meeting and lawful association, liberty of the press and gratuitous secular compulsory education. The Parliamentary situation appears less strained. Spuller, Brisson and Floquet declare that they would not accept portfolios in a new Ministry. It is generally believed that when Beaudry D'Asson interpellates the Government will make declarations which will lead to a vote of clarations which will lead to a vote of confidence and end the crisis by consoli-dating the Ministry.

AUSTRIA.

London, December 1.—A Vienna cor respondent says that Count Zichy's resignation is the first sign of Baron Hay merle having decided upon great change in Austrian diplomacy. A conviction prevails that Austria will support a English efforts at Constantinople as far as possible.

The illumination will be by means of what are called electric jets, each of fifty-six candle power, which is the measurement of the electric

A sensation was caused on Sunday morning in the Roman Catholic parish church of St. Felix at Cape Rouge, ten miles from Quebec. The congregation were upon their knees, and the village cure was engaged in the consecration at high mass, when instantaneously the sanctuary lamp exploded, the burning of running upon the officiating priest and the altar. The celebration of the mass came to an abrupt ending, and the cure, with the assistance of the beadle and others succeeded in extinguishing the with the assistance of the beadle and others succeeded in extinguishing the fire, not, however, before he had been badly burned upon the hands and head. The damage is trifling, but had the explosion occurred at night the church would have been burned to the ground. No cause is assigned for the accident.
