A FATAL QUARREL.

In Which a Peace-maker Met His Death.

The Victim Stepped in Between Two Combatants, and Had His Head Broken.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—A serious row occurred in Rockland yesterday morning, resulting in the death of Joseph Rochon, an employee of Edwards' mill. Two men, Rochon and Guidon, both employees of Edwards' mill, got into a dispute yesterday morning over some wood which they had piled up to take to their respective homes. In the midst of the dispute a brother of Rochon's stepped in between them to prevent the row going further, and to separate them. Guidon, who is a boy about 19 years of age, picked up a stone and threw it at the peace-maker. This brought a return from the latter, who picked up several stones and remarked that "two could play at that game." At the same time throwing one of the stones, inflicting a severe scalp wound on Guidon's head. The blow felled Guidon, but recovering immediately, he knocked Rochon down and commenced to pummel his head on each side, beating it into a jelly. Rochon never recovered consciousness, and died at 8.30 p.m.

AN OCTOBER WEDDING

Miss Georgina Copeland United to Mr. Carter, of Chatham Conservatory of Music.

Windsor Record Oct. 24.—A very quiet wedding occurred last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Copeland, 146 Victoria avenue, when their second daughter, Mary Georgina, was united in marriage with Mr. Roy Victor Carter, of Chatham, Rev. Canon Hincks officiating. The bride was attired in a gown of white organdie, trimmed with satin ribbon and lace, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. There were no attendants, and only members of the immediate families were present, no invitations being issued.

At the close of the interesting ceremony after a bountiful repast was partaken of, and happiness of the bride and groom, a very joyous reception, when a number of young friends of the bride came in to extend their congratulations. Miss Grace Story very gracefully proposed the health and happiness of the bride and groom, which was pleasantly responded to by the groom. Many kind remembrances were received by the bride, among them being a handsome lamp, the gift of a number of Miss Copeland's personal lady friends. The happy couple left at 10.30 for London and Simcoe, the home of the groom.

While a resident here as a member of the faculty of the Krane Conservatory of Music, Miss Copeland made many friends and her ability as a pianist was generally recognized. The music-loving citizens of Chatham will feel pleased that her connection with the conservatory has now been made permanent and will extend their hearty congratulations to both Mr. and Mrs. Carter.

THE SEATS COME HIGH

To See the City of London Volunteers Return From Africa.

Advantage points, where the procession of the City of London Imperial Volunteers is progressing. There is a great demand for the seats, and high prices are being realized. It costs from five shillings to half a guinea for a seat along Elgare Road, five to ten guineas for a seat in Piccadilly, and from two to three guineas along Fleet Street. The wine list for the banquet to the returning troops includes 900 quarts of champagne, 400 bottles of sherry and 300 bottles of claret.

It's Your Nerves.

It's the Condition of Your Nerves That Either Makes Your Life a Round of Pleasure or a Useless Burden.

To many women life is one round of sickness, weakness and ill health. To attempt even the lightest household duties fatigues them. Many of the symptoms accompanying this state of decline are: a feeling of tiredness, faintness, dizziness, sinking feeling, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, loss of appetite, cold hands and feet, headache, dark circles under the eyes, pain in the back and side and all other accompaniments of a run down and weakened constitution.

All these symptoms and conditions are simply the result of a poor quality and defective circulation of the blood, with a wasting away of the nerve forces.

By feeding the system with

WILLIAM STANDS

In Awe of His Grandmother, Queen Victoria, It is Said.

Her Majesty Always Pleased When England and Germany Work in Harmony.

New York, Oct. 25.—Lord Salisbury's explanations of the motives of the Anglo-German alliance "will find a sympathetic hearing at Balmoral," says the Tribune's London correspondent. It is a current saying that the only person of whom the German emperor stands in awe is his grand-grandmother, Queen Victoria. He is influenced by her, and she has a strong affection for him. Her sympathies have always been excited when England and Germany have been working together in diplomacy. The two governments already had a secret understanding in respect to Africa, and the present agreement was made, and many of the best informed men in the diplomatic world have been convinced that the secret included possible contingencies in the far east. It is not, indeed, a new thing for Lord Salisbury to make a secret arrangement with continental powers. What is unusual is the peculiar manner in which this fresh compact has been sprung upon Europe. That baffles conjecture.

LITERARY NOTES.

McCLURE'S FOR NOV.

McClure's Magazine for November will contain a vivid account of the siege of the foreign legation in Peking, written as a diary by Katharine Mulikin Lowry, who was present. It is a story of the life of the soul-stirring events that we already know, and will make clear many incidents upon which we have hitherto had little light. It will be illustrated with plates of the legation quarters, and of the British legation.

In McClure's will, also appear an article entitled, "The First Flight of Count Zeppelin's Airship," written by an experienced aeronaut, Eugen Wolf, who was Count Zeppelin's assistant in his experiments and companion in the trial flight. The article explains the construction of the airship and tells the story of its successful trial on July 2nd. The accompanying pictures are from photographs by the author.

SHE GOT A DOLLAR

A Woman Over Seventy Sues a False Lover

Of the Same Age for Breach of Promise of Marriage.

Woodstock, Oct. 25.—At the assizes here the case of Elstone vs. King, was an action brought by Mrs. Mary Elstone, of this town, against John King, of Hickson, for $5,000 damages for alleged breach of promise of marriage. The plaintiff, Mrs. Elstone, is over 70 years of age, and the defendant, John King, is several years older. Mrs. Elstone was the first to take the stand, and she related the story of the courtship which extended a year and a half. She said that King called on her and told her that he was looking for a wife, and that he thought she would make a good one. Everything went favorably until the day set for the wedding, when King came in and told her that he had received a letter from his son-in-law, saying that she had been telling the neighbors about the affair. She denied the thing positively, but King had not been to see her since that day. She had gone to King's place to see him about the affair, and he said he hoped she would not go to court about it. In reply to a question, Mrs. Elstone said she had been told that King was worth $10,000. Counsel for the defense moved for a non-suit, on the ground that there was no corroboration of the promise of marriage. The judge pointed out that no doubt the thought of marriage was at the back of it all, and ordered the case proceed with. The defendant then took the stand and admitted visiting plaintiff and talking about marriage, but also admitted having proposed marriage to her. In addressing the jury, the judge said the case was a most remarkable one, considering the extreme ages of the principals. He also said that there was no doubt that defendant had married in his eye. The jury, after being out for some 15 minutes, awarded Mrs. Elstone $1 damages.

A WHIM OF GENIUS.

Stevenson the Strangest Tantalizing Nature

Ever Known for Her Own. At the time Mr. Stevenson purchased his estate in Samoa, a writer in the London Hawk, over the signature of John O. Dreams, gave the following fascinating gossip of what he was pleased to term a "wild, dainty, unpleased creature." "The fact is," he says, "that Stevenson's literary work is a mere exercise on a remarkable personality—if a personality may bear an exercise—and the man is so much above literature that some who know him do not reckon his books at all; while others confuse him with his books. What a pity it is that we cannot give a proper picture of a man like Stevenson. No living creature could say an ill word of him; every man that ever saw him loved him from the first time of meeting, and I believe that the only beings created by God who did not feel drawn to him were those dreadful, proper women, who could not understand the strangest tantalizing that ever Mother Nature nursed for her very own.

"In all my life I have never seen a fellow who has such a gift of attracting affection, and the queer thing is that the affection once attracted always remains with him, so that he has never lost a friend nor made an enemy. Moreover, by some miraculous work it happens that in whatever company he is placed he becomes first, and that, too, without any effort. As soon as he opens his mouth something falls from which forces you to heed him, and the intense charm of the talk is so moving that most men do not care to check the magic of it by interpolating words of their own; so that at one time I fear that Master Louis was acquiring a trick of monologue which gained upon him; but it did not matter; there is no man whom I ever knew who would not be very content to let Stevenson pour out his indescribably beautiful thought. I know that if I had the blessed luck to get the chance of another day's chat with him, and he had the fancy to go at it in monologue for a dozen hours, I should take precious good care to keep from interruption. Let me name one very singular thing: You cannot remain long in Stevenson's company without feeling like a good man. You may not be good, mark you, any more than I am, but everything that is bad in you lies low, and every power that makes for kindness, tenderness, uprightness and charity, seems as if it must begin to flourish. The more I think of this the more it puzzles me, because the fellow is just about as far from being a saint as anyone may be. He can be as broad as anybody, and he will sometimes emphasize his conversation with effects of blasphemy which are most broad and picturesque; yet, swearing from him becomes artistically right on the instant, and everything he says seems clear and pure."

Tiny Republics of the World. A quaint little Republic came to light only recently when the citizens of Andorra boldly threw off the yoke of tribute to the French. 'Tis true it was only the sum of $200 which they refused to pay; but their action was sufficient to recall from obscurity for a moment the Lilliputian realm nestling on the heights of the Pyrenees. The tale of Andorra measures less than eighteen miles in either direction; but it is the home of one of the oldest Republics in the world, the Constitution of which is four years older than England's Magna Charta. The Andorran number is all but 10,000 souls, and these and their ancestors have lived for 1,000 years in the heart of Europe without having written one word of its history.

But Andorra is only one of a score of tiny Republics and miniature nations, some of which are only to be found marked on navigators' charts. Tavarua, for instance, is the smallest Republic on the face of the globe. It occupies an island off the northeast coast of Samoa, and comprises fifty-five people. It enjoys, however, the distinction of equal suffrage. Then there are Goust, Franceville and San Marino, all smaller than Andorra. Truly, one-half of the world knows not the other half.
