and ye, O rivers, that run to the sea,
Flashing your waters in shade or sun,
treamlet and brooklet from over the lea
What are ye doing the while ye run?
tright and swift, as they win their way
"We are doing the Will of God?" ory they

Brave winds that wander far and near, Like errant knights careering by, Blowing your trumpets, high and clear, Or breathing soft as baby's sigh; What are ye doing by night and day? "Doing the Will of God?" laugh they.

Once more-O stars in the azure sky,

Flooding with light all things terrene What are ye doing? Tell me, pray, 'Doing the Will of God?" chant they. Then to my soul in its selfish dreams,

From the sun and the moon and t starry powers, To follow them all in their high ender ad do the Will of thy God forever." ELEANOR C. DONNELLY.

JUST AS IT HAPPENED.

By Mary Catherine Crowley

Pretty Annie Daly! Thus had she been known among the neighbors from her childhood; from the time blue-oyed, rosy little lass, shy and gentle-spoken, but roguish withal, in-clined to romping and gay, barmless Rest! This was an acceptance of the world now.

For days she lay alone in a room of the dilapidated old building which open, and his expression, while not natural, was placed and not of a ghastly approximately the state of the dilapidated old building which open and his expression, while not naturally was placed and not of a ghastly approximately the state of the state o clined to romping and gay, harmless pranks.

Her parents had migrated to this remote western district from one of the crowded cities of the Atlantic coast. The mother, a devout Irish Catholic, was in declining health, broken down by poverty and overwork; the father was a steady, industrious good-natured man, 'this country born,' his wife was wont to explain born, as if accounting for a certain lack of religious ardor, sometimes, alas! to be observed among descendants of pious exiles of Erin.

Two years after the family, with many bright hopes for the future, had taken possession of the small farm, the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic, at the age of fourteen, was her to be considered to the poor girl seemed benumbed. She saw nothing of sorrow the senses of the poor girl seemed benumbed. She saw nothing of wast was happening around the small farm, and the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic, at the age of fourteen, was her god. She had no wish, no thought beyond him served young children as best she found. The portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic was the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic was the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic was the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic was the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic was the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic was the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic was the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic was the portion of Government lands allotted to them, Mrs. Daly died, and Annic was the portion of Govern
