The effect of their marriage was fully discussed.

Doukhobors' party numbering about twenty were brought to Rosetown, Man., by train on the 4th and taken in charge by the local mounted police and escorted back to their village next morning. The party, made up of men, women and children, kept up a continuous chant as they were marched through Rosetown streets. This is the party recently arrested near Yorktown. They travelled the whole distance of about 250 miles on foot, avoiding all towns and villages on the way. The Doukhobors designate Rosetown as "Hell" and their mounted escorts as "Devils."

A special London cable of the 4th to Montreal says: An extraordinary adventure, says a Chronicle correspondent, telegraphing on Monday, last night, before two young Canadians visiting Paris. They arrived in Paris early in the evening, and after securing rooms went to the Theatre Francaise, where they took tickets for a box in the second tier. Neither understood a word of the French language and this, coupled with the fatigue of their long journey, and a good dinner, led to their very speedily falling asleep. About 2 o'clock this morning two policemen passing the theatre were startled by hearing a noise proceeding from the interior. Hunting up the concierge, they entered the building and found the two Canadians, who had awoke at 1 o'clock and found the theatre in darkness. They were taken before a commissary and being able through an interpreter to convince the magistrate of the truth of their story, were set at liberty. According to the Chronicle's news agency the police before entering the theatre, surrounded strong reinforcements and fire brigade.
