In the following winter the patrol camped at Dease Bay, on the north coast of the lake, and in the spring of 1916 they pushed on into the country lying immediately north of that point. In May they came upon a band of Eskimos that gave them further information about the priests, who, they said, had been killed by two native tribesmen, at that time a little further inland. Shortly afterward the man-hunters came upon the men they were looking for, and had little difficulty in getting the story from them. They confessed to the murder, but could give no clear explanation of why they com mited it. As near as could be made out, there had been a misunderstanding between the priests and the Eskimos, and in a sudden fit of temper they stabbed and killed the two missionaries, appropiating some of their personal belongings. They gave no resistance to their captors, and have since been model prisoners.

Bearing One's Cross

Everybody in this world has a oss of some kind to bear. It may be one lying unseen in the ilence of the heart's profoundest lepths; or it may be one that is painfully visible to all. To some God gives but one great cross to pear; on others He showers what eems like a mltitude of smaller ones. But, great or small, or one or many, the cross is there, and must be carried.

Some bearers wreathe their rosses with the sharp thorns of epining and discontent; others with the soft blossoms of patience and hope. It is largely a matter of choice, resting with the bearer; perience that he finds his cross ightest who has learned-bitter hough the lesson is-to smile with others at his own miseries.
