Every Joint in His Body Sore And Stiff.

"When I started taking Tanlac I had been laid up with rheumatism for three months, and was so bad for a month that I couldn't even walk. I had had it for a year and spent nearly a hundred dollars, but kept getting worse instead of better." is the statement made recently by Wallace Corey Lowe, a prosperous farmer, living at Head of Amherst, Nova Scotia.

"Every joint in my body was stiff and swollen and I suffered terrible pain all over. My legs and arms were swollen to twice their natural size and it would take me an hour to get out of bed and on my feet in the mornings. I hadn't the strength of an infant, couldn't lift a pound weight and was in pain day and night."

"I had dropped down from one hundred and fifty-six pounds to one hundred and twenty-one. My stomach was all knocked out by the strong rheumatism medicines so that nothing agreed with me. In a few weeks after I began taking Tanlac I was back to my normal weight and feeling as fine as I ever did in my life. It certainly is astonishing what Tanlac will do."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Modes vs. Morals Discussed in New Photoplay.

CHARACTER AND STAR OF "WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME" GIVE VARIED VIEWS.

In an evening gown the garb of degradation?

Without hesitation most of us would say that it is not, but the stern parent in "Why Girls Leave Home," which will be shown at the Nichol Theatre soon, is firm in the belief that it is a sham and ingenious mode of revealing the backs of women. In direct contrast to this assertion Anna Q. Nilsson, who is the featured player in the screen play, contends that there is nothing suggestive about an evening gown, and that furthermore it serves to make women more attractive in the eyes of their admirers.

"Practically all of a woman's life is centered on being attractive to either her husband or intimate friends," said Miss Nilsson, smiling demurely. "Surely, if we take away the right of a woman to look her best, we rob her of the only possession with which to hold her man. But evening gowns are not to be despised. In the picture my father sternly objects to my wearing the gown simply because he is an old-fashioned, narrow minded person whose foresight has never gone beyond the four walls of his home. The broader viewpoint on this question can be brought about by education and religion, and by a saner and more appreciative consideration of their daughter's problem by the parents."

Prominent members of the cast supporting Miss Nilsson include Claude King, Julia Swayne Gordon, Maurine Powers, Cot. Albertson, George Leese, Dan Mason, Kate Blanke, Kathryn Perry (Mrs. Owne Moore) and others of prominence in the screen world.
