

RETAIL CLERKS FORM STRONG BODY AT MASS MEETING

Over Two Hundred Join Association to Start and They Will Work to Secure Better Conditions of Labor for Store Assistants of Calgary.

RECREATION, SHORTER HOURS ARE WANTED

Great Enthusiasm Prevails at Meeting Presided Over by Mayor Sinnott While Speakers Include 3 Calgary Representatives in Legislature.

The Retail Clerks' association effected a highly successful inauguration last night at the Page Hall, at which place a mass meeting was held for the purpose of organizing the association. His worship the mayor was in the chair, and the principal speakers were the three local members of parliament—Dr. Blawie, Mr. Tweedie, and S. E. Hillock, who were all present.

The hall was well filled, about 350 clerks, of whom about half were ladies, attending, and a very enthusiastic meeting was the result.

The mayor, who was loudly cheered, in his opening remarks said that he felt distinctly honored in having been invited to preside, and said that although he had attended many meetings, he had not had a previous opportunity of taking part in such a one as a first organization meeting for such a purpose.

Co-operation With Employers. Dr. Blawie said that he was afraid he did not know as much of the troubles of store clerks as he perhaps should know, but he thought that they must have troubles of their own, and he thought that they should be able to solve them.

He thought that if clerks were required to be kept so late at work that they should receive some compensation in another way than by weekly half holiday for a certain period of the year. He gave the clerks some very whole-some advice with regard to their ambitions, and urged them to strive to better their conditions.

A Patient Class. Mr. Hillock said that he believed that they were in the midst of a social revolution, and urged them to adopt a revolutionary attitude towards one another, to be true to themselves, and there would be no question about them being true to their employers. He thought that retail clerks had some grievances, and those who adopted the view that all is well were living in a false paradise.

He thought that retail clerks had more patients than any other class, and instances cases of clerks who were treated as slaves, some of the "nouveau riches" who treated the clerks as though they were dirt under their feet, and he thought that the clerks should be able to get rid of them as mere machines, giving all kinds of trouble without even a "Thank you" at the end of the day.

He thought that if clerks were required to be kept so late at work that they should receive some compensation in another way than by weekly half holiday for a certain period of the year. He gave the clerks some very whole-some advice with regard to their ambitions, and urged them to strive to better their conditions.

Resting Accommodation. Some clerks had to be on their feet for nine or ten hours a day. (A voice: "Fourteen.") That was worse still. He believed that clerks should have resting accommodation provided for them. He could see no reason why not. In some of the stores in American cities they had them, and there was no reason why they should not have them here in Calgary.

Another thing the association should stand for was proper sanitation and ventilation. Speaking generally, and not in judgment on the city stores, some of the stores which he had visited were full of rats, and he thought that the average clerk was paid at a lesser rate than the unskilled laborer. There was skilled labor; they were expected to know all about the goods they were handling, and their work was complicated and high class, and it did not seem that they were paid sufficiently for the knowledge they possessed.

He thought that their conditions could be advanced by means of a association, and suggested that it should be provincial, or that it should affiliate with similar organizations in other towns. They would thus be able to present their case to the legislature, with telling effect, and to obtain their rights.

Adequate Remuneration. T. M. Tweedie said that a great deal had been said about wages, which in a great many cases were not enough to live on. He thought the clerks were worthy of their hire, and should receive adequate remuneration. He urged that the association be formed on a solid basis and on scientific lines. The officers should be of sound business sagacity, and competent to carry on its affairs. A schedule of wages should be obtained, showing the average amount paid in the city, so that they could put a case squarely before the employers in case of under payment. They must get actual facts and figures.

With regard to sanitation and ventilation, they should study well the laws of hygiene, so that they could back up their contentions, and make an impression on the legislature if need be, but it would be impossible without scientific application.

As to employers, he thought that sometimes demands were made on employees before sufficient thought had been given to the subject. He urged them to thoroughly thrash out every matter before making an unreasonable case, and he thought that no employer would refuse a reasonable case.

He thought that all stores, irrespective of

What the West Did Yesterday

PRINCE RUPERT.

Million and a quarter pounds of fish brought into Prince Rupert harbor during month's time. At the low estimate of 5 cents a pound, there was nearly $70,000 worth of different kinds landed by boats in this port during last 30 days.

WINNIPEG.

Total Manitoba grain area this year is 8,822,093 acres, being an increase of 146,000 acres over last year. The wheat area is 3,140,218 acres, an increase of 18,000 over last year.

FORT WILLIAM.

Six camps with 80 men in each, are now working in district west of Fort William on new road construction. Two new wholesale houses are establishing here.

NELSON.

New copper furnace at Trail Smelter, the most modern one in Canada, was blown in this morning. The increase in capacity of plant 450 tons daily.

CALGARY.

Local company capitalized at $250,000, which is to erect a cold storage plant and ice factory, apply to city for suitable site.

MACLEOD.

Work on $65,000 filtration plant started this morning, when finished, it will be the best of its kind on continent.

nationality, should close not later than 10 o'clock. He was of opinion that both employers and employees were almost unanimous that an arrangement should be made that stores were being kept open beyond that hour. He thought that a thoroughly representative association would be able to produce the desired effect.

Time for Recreation. It was a shame that a large number of men and women should be compelled to take their only recreation between 10 o'clock and 11 o'clock. He thought that the purchasing public who were at fault and who were mainly responsible for the long hours and undue treatment which the clerks had to put up with. It also might, in some cases, be the employers, and in some cases the clerks themselves, but it mainly lay with the purchasing public. He was pleased to have had it pointed out to him that one of the principal objects of the association would be to co-operate with the employers rather than to work against them.

He thought that if clerks were required to be kept so late at work that they should receive some compensation in another way than by weekly half holiday for a certain period of the year. He gave the clerks some very whole-some advice with regard to their ambitions, and urged them to strive to better their conditions.

A Patient Class. Mr. Hillock said that he believed that they were in the midst of a social revolution, and urged them to adopt a revolutionary attitude towards one another, to be true to themselves, and there would be no question about them being true to their employers. He thought that retail clerks had some grievances, and those who adopted the view that all is well were living in a false paradise.

He thought that retail clerks had more patients than any other class, and instances cases of clerks who were treated as slaves, some of the "nouveau riches" who treated the clerks as though they were dirt under their feet, and he thought that the clerks should be able to get rid of them as mere machines, giving all kinds of trouble without even a "Thank you" at the end of the day.

He thought that if clerks were required to be kept so late at work that they should receive some compensation in another way than by weekly half holiday for a certain period of the year. He gave the clerks some very whole-some advice with regard to their ambitions, and urged them to strive to better their conditions.

Resting Accommodation. Some clerks had to be on their feet for nine or ten hours a day. (A voice: "Fourteen.") That was worse still. He believed that clerks should have resting accommodation provided for them. He could see no reason why not. In some of the stores in American cities they had them, and there was no reason why they should not have them here in Calgary.

Another thing the association should stand for was proper sanitation and ventilation. Speaking generally, and not in judgment on the city stores, some of the stores which he had visited were full of rats, and he thought that the average clerk was paid at a lesser rate than the unskilled laborer. There was skilled labor; they were expected to know all about the goods they were handling, and their work was complicated and high class, and it did not seem that they were paid sufficiently for the knowledge they possessed.

He thought that their conditions could be advanced by means of a association, and suggested that it should be provincial, or that it should affiliate with similar organizations in other towns. They would thus be able to present their case to the legislature, with telling effect, and to obtain their rights.

Adequate Remuneration. T. M. Tweedie said that a great deal had been said about wages, which in a great many cases were not enough to live on. He thought the clerks were worthy of their hire, and should receive adequate remuneration. He urged that the association be formed on a solid basis and on scientific lines. The officers should be of sound business sagacity, and competent to carry on its affairs. A schedule of wages should be obtained, showing the average amount paid in the city, so that they could put a case squarely before the employers in case of under payment. They must get actual facts and figures.

With regard to sanitation and ventilation, they should study well the laws of hygiene, so that they could back up their contentions, and make an impression on the legislature if need be, but it would be impossible without scientific application.

As to employers, he thought that sometimes demands were made on employees before sufficient thought had been given to the subject. He urged them to thoroughly thrash out every matter before making an unreasonable case, and he thought that no employer would refuse a reasonable case.

He thought that all stores, irrespective of nationality, should close not later than 10 o'clock. He was of opinion that both employers and employees were almost unanimous that an arrangement should be made that stores were being kept open beyond that hour. He thought that a thoroughly representative association would be able to produce the desired effect.

Time for Recreation. It was a shame that a large number of men and women should be compelled to take their only recreation between 10 o'clock and 11 o'clock. He thought that the purchasing public who were at fault and who were mainly responsible for the long hours and undue treatment which the clerks had to put up with. It also might, in some cases, be the employers, and in some cases the clerks themselves, but it mainly lay with the purchasing public. He was pleased to have had it pointed out to him that one of the principal objects of the association would be to co-operate with the employers rather than to work against them.

He thought that if clerks were required to be kept so late at work that they should receive some compensation in another way than by weekly half holiday for a certain period of the year. He gave the clerks some very whole-some advice with regard to their ambitions, and urged them to strive to better their conditions.

A Patient Class. Mr. Hillock said that he believed that they were in the midst of a social revolution, and urged them to adopt a revolutionary attitude towards one another, to be true to themselves, and there would be no question about them being true to their employers. He thought that retail clerks had some grievances, and those who adopted the view that all is well were living in a false paradise.

He thought that retail clerks had more patients than any other class, and instances cases of clerks who were treated as slaves, some of the "nouveau riches" who treated the clerks as though they were dirt under their feet, and he thought that the clerks should be able to get rid of them as mere machines, giving all kinds of trouble without even a "Thank you" at the end of the day.

He thought that if clerks were required to be kept so late at work that they should receive some compensation in another way than by weekly half holiday for a certain period of the year. He gave the clerks some very whole-some advice with regard to their ambitions, and urged them to strive to better their conditions.

Resting Accommodation. Some clerks had to be on their feet for nine or ten hours a day. (A voice: "Fourteen.") That was worse still. He believed that clerks should have resting accommodation provided for them. He could see no reason why not. In some of the stores in American cities they had them, and there was no reason why they should not have them here in Calgary.

Another thing the association should stand for was proper sanitation and ventilation. Speaking generally, and not in judgment on the city stores, some of the stores which he had visited were full of rats, and he thought that the average clerk was paid at a lesser rate than the unskilled laborer. There was skilled labor; they were expected to know all about the goods they were handling, and their work was complicated and high class, and it did not seem that they were paid sufficiently for the knowledge they possessed.

He thought that their conditions could be advanced by means of a association, and suggested that it should be provincial, or that it should affiliate with similar organizations in other towns. They would thus be able to present their case to the legislature, with telling effect, and to obtain their rights.

Adequate Remuneration. T. M. Tweedie said that a great deal had been said about wages, which in a great many cases were not enough to live on. He thought the clerks were worthy of their hire, and should receive adequate remuneration. He urged that the association be formed on a solid basis and on scientific lines. The officers should be of sound business sagacity, and competent to carry on its affairs. A schedule of wages should be obtained, showing the average amount paid in the city, so that they could put a case squarely before the employers in case of under payment. They must get actual facts and figures.

With regard to sanitation and ventilation, they should study well the laws of hygiene, so that they could back up their contentions, and make an impression on the legislature if need be, but it would be impossible without scientific application.

As to employers, he thought that sometimes demands were made on employees before sufficient thought had been given to the subject. He urged them to thoroughly thrash out every matter before making an unreasonable case, and he thought that no employer would refuse a reasonable case.

He thought that all stores, irrespective of nationality, should close not later than 10 o'clock. He was of opinion that both employers and employees were almost unanimous that an arrangement should be made that stores were being kept open beyond that hour. He thought that a thoroughly representative association would be able to produce the desired effect.

Time for Recreation. It was a shame that a large number of men and women should be compelled to take their only recreation between 10 o'clock and 11 o'clock. He thought that the purchasing public who were at fault and who were mainly responsible for the long hours and undue treatment which the clerks had to put up with. It also might, in some cases, be the employers, and in some cases the clerks themselves, but it mainly lay with the purchasing public. He was pleased to have had it pointed out to him that one of the principal objects of the association would be to co-operate with the employers rather than to work against them.

He thought that if clerks were required to be kept so late at work that they should receive some compensation in another way than by weekly half holiday for a certain period of the year. He gave the clerks some very whole-some advice with regard to their ambitions, and urged them to strive to better their conditions.

A Patient Class. Mr. Hillock said that he believed that they were in the midst of a social revolution, and urged them to adopt a revolutionary attitude towards one another, to be true to themselves, and there would be no question about them being true to their employers. He thought that retail clerks had some grievances, and those who adopted the view that all is well were living in a false paradise.

He thought that retail clerks had more patients than any other class, and instances cases of clerks who were treated as slaves, some of the "nouveau riches" who treated the clerks as though they were dirt under their feet, and he thought that the clerks should be able to get rid of them as mere machines, giving all kinds of trouble without even a "Thank you" at the end of the day.

He thought that if clerks were required to be kept so late at work that they should receive some compensation in another way than by weekly half holiday for a certain period of the year. He gave the clerks some very whole-some advice with regard to their ambitions, and urged them to strive to better their conditions.

Resting Accommodation. Some clerks had to be on their feet for nine or ten hours a day. (A voice: "Fourteen.") That was worse still. He believed that clerks should have resting accommodation provided for them. He could see no reason why not. In some of the stores in American cities they had them, and there was no reason why they should not have them here in Calgary.

Another thing the association should stand for was proper sanitation and ventilation. Speaking generally, and not in judgment on the city stores, some of the stores which he had visited were full of rats, and he thought that the average clerk was paid at a lesser rate than the unskilled laborer. There was skilled labor; they were expected to know all about the goods they were handling, and their work was complicated and high class, and it did not seem that they were paid sufficiently for the knowledge they possessed.

He thought that their conditions could be advanced by means of a association, and suggested that it should be provincial, or that it should affiliate with similar organizations in other towns. They would thus be able to present their case to the legislature, with telling effect, and to obtain their rights.

Adequate Remuneration. T. M. Tweedie said that a great deal had been said about wages, which in a great many cases were not enough to live on. He thought the clerks were worthy of their hire, and should receive adequate remuneration. He urged that the association be formed on a solid basis and on scientific lines. The officers should be of sound business sagacity, and competent to carry on its affairs. A schedule of wages should be obtained, showing the average amount paid in the city, so that they could put a case squarely before the employers in case of under payment. They must get actual facts and figures.

With regard to sanitation and ventilation, they should study well the laws of hygiene, so that they could back up their contentions, and make an impression on the legislature if need be, but it would be impossible without scientific application.

As to employers, he thought that sometimes demands were made on employees before sufficient thought had been given to the subject. He urged them to thoroughly thrash out every matter before making an unreasonable case, and he thought that no employer would refuse a reasonable case.

He thought that all stores, irrespective of nationality, should close not later than 10 o'clock. He was of opinion that both employers and employees were almost unanimous that an arrangement should be made that stores were being kept open beyond that hour. He thought that a thoroughly representative association would be able to produce the desired effect.

Time for Recreation. It was a shame that a large number of men and women should be compelled to take their only recreation between 10 o'clock and 11 o'clock. He thought that the purchasing public who were at fault and who were mainly responsible for the long hours and undue treatment which the clerks had to put up with. It also might, in some cases, be the employers, and in some cases the clerks themselves, but it mainly lay with the purchasing public. He was pleased to have had it pointed out to him that one of the principal objects of the association would be to co-operate with the employers rather than to work against them.

He thought that if clerks were required to be kept so late at work that they should receive some compensation in another way than by weekly half holiday for a certain period of the year. He gave the clerks some very whole-some advice with regard to their ambitions, and urged them to strive to better their conditions.

A Patient Class. Mr. Hillock said that he believed that they were in the midst of a social revolution, and urged them to adopt a revolutionary attitude towards one another, to be true to themselves, and there would be no question about them being true to their employers. He thought that retail clerks had some grievances, and those who adopted the view that all is well were living in a false paradise.

He thought that retail clerks had more patients than any other class, and instances cases of clerks who were treated as slaves, some of the "nouveau riches" who treated the clerks as though they were dirt under their feet, and he thought that the clerks should be able to get rid of them as mere machines, giving all kinds of trouble without even a "Thank you" at the end of the day.

CUPID LURKS IN HOTEL; NINE EMPLOYEES JOIN THE BENEDICTS

Day Clerk and Cigar Counter Girl Latest to Walk the Matrimonial Plank

Cupid apparently has taken an extended trip to Calgary and roosted in the King George hotel. The ninth of a series of weddings which have taken place among the employees of the hotel during the past year was solemnized last night at the parsonage of the Church of the Redeemer, when Guy Beers, day clerk, and Miss Nellie Counts, one of the two young women in charge of the cigar stand, were made one.

Proprietor Chasley Bell is watching both Beers and his young bride with painful eyes.

"Too many of our good help have been married and forgotten, to come back from their honeymoon," declared Bell. "My last day clerk pleased his fiancée so much when he married the stewardess of the King George that he took her to Saskatoon and made him manager of his hotel. I am not going to give Guy and Nellie a wedding present, but am going further, than a mere gift. I am raising his salary on the day of his wedding, and raising it substantially, too. I certainly hope that they will make a happy home."

Cashier and Assistant Manager Moran is the official guest of the wedding. Every time one of the employees of the King George starts for the altar Moran takes his place and works out the shift until the honeymoon is over.

Mr. Moran has been called upon to fill in as day clerk, night clerk, head porter, night porter and bartender. Now he is casting uneasy looks at the boot-black and the dishwashers, fearing Cupid may strike one of the latter next.

The weddings have come along with alarming frequency, and with but a few weeks in between. In February Richard Sutton, day clerk, and Elizabeth McCormick, stewardess, were married.

Herbert Redfern, head porter, popped the question to his fiancée, formerly of Mr. Bell's Royal Hotel, and a month ago they were married. Mr. and Mrs. Redfern are now making Beers and his bride walk the plank last night.

Edward Craig, the night porter, slipped away and was married last week. The head bartender, mixed too many little and under the table and took advantage of him. This was six months ago. The head bartender, mixed too many little and under the table and took advantage of him. This was six months ago.

Emma Carus, the musical comedy star, who is registered at the King George, declares the place is no proper place for a wedding, but has promised that she will recommend it strongly to Nat Goodwin, DeWolf Hopper and others who are "gluttons for punishment."

YANCOOVER PROVOKES MAWSON WRATH BY CHANGING PLANS

(Continued from page one.)

make the best of them and do all you can to add to the natural beauty that is in complete, or are you going to hold yourselves up to the ridicule of Vancouver?

"Now with regard to how Europe will look at this question I may, perhaps, without egotism, point out that I have recognized throughout the continent as an expert in my own particular line, not only in England, but in France, Holland, Sweden, Germany and Greece, and in all the countries in which I have been consulted by the directors of large corporations, such as the Carnegie Trust at the Palace of Peace in Holland. What then is Europe going to think if you throw over a man with a world-wide reputation because he has never heard of proper hearth and home? Money is a thing of the present, and how tight do you think it will be if you start Europe laughing at you in this way?

If the Scheme is Rejected. "This is not the worst, however. The thing that Europe is most concerned about when it sends you money to invest in enterprises here is: Are the business men of the West straight? Will they do the right thing by us and by our money? If you throw up this scheme of mine, which, though I say it myself, is a good scheme, is Europe to place one prepared by a man, however good he may be at his own work, is an amateur at mine, what kind of an impression will it make in Europe? Will the capitalists there be impressed with your business morality, shrewdness and ability, and will they think that you have made a good and businesslike use of the fees you have paid me for my work and that you are making a good and economical use of the plans now you have got them and have incurred all the expense of them? Well, you can answer this question as well as I can."

What is going to be your answer to these questions? Are you going to say by your actions: No! We did not appreciate the work of your foremost expert, we were so behind the culture and art of older lands that we preferred the work of a man whose whole training had fitted him for entirely different work, and who, so far as this was concerned, could play down to our level?"

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY.

SHACK to rent; hot and cold water; electric light. Apply 333-1st Ave., Sun-nyvale. 876-168.

FURNISHED or unfurnished 6 room fully modern house, close in near Mount Pleasant, for summer months. Will trade with Crockett, 348-8th Ave., Mt. Pleasant. 173-188.

FURNISHED rooms in modern house from 121-8th Ave. East. 172-191.

FOR SALE—Pair good lots. Yes! pair of best Campbell Park for $2500.00. Must sell. These are well located. I am forced to leave money. Address 123-4 St. N. E. Phone 472-168.

RAIN

Some local thunderstorms have occurred today in Northern Alberta but otherwise the weather in the west has been fine and warm.

Victoria 48 64
Vancouver 45 70
Kamloops 44 70
Edmonton 44 70
Calgary 44 70
Banff 44 70
Jasper 44 70
Moose Jaw 52 88
Regina 50 70
Winnipeg 52 78
Saskatoon 52 78
Yorkton 52 70
Pelly Sound 38 70
London 38 70
Ottawa 40 64
Montreal 46 72
Quebec 46 72
Halifax 46 72
St. John 46 72
Quebec 46 72
St. John 46 72

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers by Thursday. Saskatchewan showers and thunderstorms and local showers in partly fair and cooler.

Manitoba time and weather showers