Mr. Trumper then treated the subject in a light vein, and his original Jokes were hardly heard above the deafening roars of laughter which

Dr. Thompson, evidently affected by Mr. Trumper's style, also adopted a humorous line in his speech, and with Joke and anecdote kept his audience In a happy frame of mind.

The Ven. Archdeacon Young and Mr. Neatly spoke for the motion, and Mr. Pope against it. Mr. Gilmore then spoke again, and with the help of Lieber's Ethics strongly supported his contention. Mr. Wright in a few final words doubted the authority of Lieber, and advised a careful study of the past history of that author before taking all he said for gospel. The motion was then put to the mest-ing and defeated by a large majority. The guests were then entertained to supper, and after the customary vote of thanks to their hosts, proposed by Mr. Pope, and replied to by Mr. Trumper, the whole party joined hands and mang "Auld Lang Syne," which brought the very pleasant evening to a close.

authorized to contract for the work. Horatio Greenough, of Massachusetts, a sculptor of some fame, was selected, and he went to Florence. Italy, to make the model and superintend the carving of the statue. In 1842 it was ready for shipment to this country. It was first proposed to bring it over in a warship, but it was discovered that to place it safely on the vessel would require the breaking out of sundry bulkheads, so the idea was abandoned. On arrival at Washington it was placed in the rotunda of the capitol, and then broke forth a storm of cratory, in which the work was most severely criticised and ridiculed. both as to its design and its execution. The artist in vain tried to defend his

A resolution ordered it removed from the capitol, and it finally found a resting place on the plaza in front of the eastern entrance. To preserve it from injury during the winter it has been the custom for many years to erect over it a wooden house in the late fall. This wooden covering has always been an unsightly object, and as the statue has of late suffered somewhat from vandalism, it has been suggested that it should be inclosed in a glass case.
