RHUBARB.
While rhubarb has been cultivated in this country since 1572, it is only lately that it has been grown as a substitute for fruit. The early cultivation of the plant was altogether for the sake of the root, which was used to prepare the medicinal rhubarb. As regards the date of the introduction of the rhubarb into this country we may note that E. M. Holmes in the "Encyclopaedia Britannica" states that it "was introduced into England through Sir Matthew Lister, physician to Charles I., who gave seed obtained by him in Italy to the botanist Parkinson."

The rhubarb of our gardens is a native of Siberia and the basin of the Volga, and its name recalls its Russian origin. The ancient name of the Volga and the Rha, and the name came to be applied to the root of the plant imported from thence. So the Romans called it Rha barbarum, the foreign root. From this come the French rhubarb. During its cultivation in this country many new varieties of rhubarb have been raised from seed.

SYNOD OF HURON TOOK NO ACTION

Refused to Pass a Resolution Against Amendment of Accession Oath.

DEBATE VERY SHORT

Motion Was Finally Withdrawn by Its Mover—Synod Comes to a Close.

The promised heated discussion on the accession oath of George V. at the meeting of the Synod of Huron yesterday afternoon fell rather flat, and after a short discussion, Mr. Frank Metcalfe, of Blyth, the mover of the notice of motion, that there be no change in the oath, asked leave of the bishop to withdraw his motion, and this was granted.

When the notice of motion came up in the regular order of business, Mr. Metcalfe said:

"I feel that this is a crisis, not only in the history of our country, but of our church. I feel that we should place on record that we are opposed to one iota of change in the constitution. I feel that the danger signal has been raised, and I do not think that it should be dropped an inch. I have no quarrel with my Roman Catholic friends. What we have won we won by our blood. I am not a member of any Orange society, but I consider that 'No Surrender' should be our cry in regard to the accession oath. I ask the unanimous support of the synod for the motion."

At this point it was found that Mr. John Ransford, who had seconded the notice of motion, had left the hall, and the bishop declared a new seconder would be necessary.

Canon Hague seconded the motion.

Drawing It Mild.
"I would suggest," said Mr. Matthew Wilson, K.C., of Chatham, that there be no discussion on this matter at all, but that we simply take a vote."

"I think," said Mr. Charles Jenkins, of Petrolia, "that before we are asked to vote on this matter that the oath should be read. I, for one, am not familiar with it, and would like to know what it is that is objected to."

A layman caused much merriment at this point by rising and saying: "The Roman Catholics want that part struck out which says their religion is 'superstitious and idolatrous,' and I say it is both."

"I would like to know," continued Mr. Jenkins, "what is wrong about the oath, and think we should all hear it read." These oaths and regulations were framed at a time when bloodshed and troubles endangered human life and menaced the state. Our late King was known as the 'Peacemaker.' It is one of the virtues of the British Empire to allow all sorts and conditions of men all kinds of religions. If at this time we could without removing any safeguard take away anything that will soothe the asperities of a past generation and help us all get along with peace and love, I can afford to see it done. Surely we can afford to be charitable, gentle and generous. If we can modify the oath in any way without sacrificing principle, let it be done."

The Oath.
The bishop inquired if anyone had a copy of the oath, and Mr. Henry Macklin produced a copy of an oath which he had procured at the public library.

Mr. E. G. Henderson pointed out that there are three oaths, and the one Mr. Macklin had was the oath of accession. The bishop on reading it agreed with this.

"What we do will not have the slightest influence in any way on what will eventually be done in regard to the oath," said Judge Holt, of Goderich. "The British Parliament will never be affected in any way by it, and I think we might as well leave the matter alone."

Mr. Macklin thought the discussion should be continued.

"We have nothing to be afraid of," he said.

"No good either to ourselves or the community will come of our going on with this matter or discussion," said Bishop Williams.

Mr. Metcalfe then asked permission to withdraw his motion, and this being given, the matter dropped.

A Motion.
Canon Hague introduced the following motion: "That article 16 of the constitution be amended as follows: Instead of the words, 'consisting of 20 clergymen and 30 laymen, who shall be elected annually by ballot out of the members of the synod by each order respectively,' insert these words, '32, of whom 16 clergymen and 16 laymen, shall be elected annually by ballot out of the members of the synod by each order, respectively, and the remainder elected by the rural deaneries in rotation, one clergyman and one layman, who is a member of the synod, being chosen from each rural deanery, and notification of the same being made to the synod office at least one month before the meeting of the synod.'"

In support of this he urged that it would have a beneficial effect on the whole diocese, and particularly upon the representatives of the outlying districts by waking them up and showing them that they were expected to do their share of the work also.

It was finally decided to refer the matter to the executive committee to report upon at the next meeting of the synod.

Some Discussion.

A motion by Canon Hicks, of Simcoe, to amend clause 5 of canon XI, by striking out all words after "effect" in line 7, and substitute therefor the following: "Provided that such exchange shall be made only in the case of parishes of nearly equal stipends, and that such appointment shall be made for a period not exceeding three years, at the expiration of which the appointment, with the concurrence of the bishop, the incumbent and congregation, or congregations, concerned, shall become permanent; or the bishop shall at his discretion proceed to effect another change in the same manner, and on the same terms as hereinbefore described," caused a great deal of discussion, and was finally referred to the executive to report on at the next synod.

On motion of Canon Downie it was decided that that portion of the bishop's charge which defines the rights of the vestry, churchwardens and clergy should be printed, and distributed among all members of the church.

A Change.

Canon Downie also proposed the following motion, which, after considerable discussion, carried: "That the names of members of the executive committee and of the provincial and general synod committees be not printed in italics on the ballot papers, and the figures, indicating the attendance at the executive committee be left out, and the word 'present' after the provincial and general synod names be omitted."

In support of his motion he pointed out that the present way of printing the names was really a method of soliciting votes. He urged that the names be all printed alike, so that no one would have any undue advantage. Those who opposed this motion pointed out that the present system showed exactly the number of meetings those members whose names were printed in italics had attended, and urged that it helped new delegates to the synod in picking out the men who had done the work.

At last night's session a number of committees were formed, the business finally concluded, and the synod meeting ended.

FRIDAY, JUNE 10.

The passenger and the station agent stood on the platform as a through train roared past in a swirl of dust. A dog rushed out in pursuit. "I wonder if he thinks he can catch it?" mused the passenger. "Don't know," said the agent, "but I'm wondering what he thinks he will do with it if he does catch it."

So We May Ask of the Men

Who are tempted to run after offerings of CHEAP CLOTHES, up and down the streets, when they catch it, "What are they going to do with it?" It costs money to make GOOD CLOTHES, and no one sells them for nothing.

SUICIDE IN A BOX AT NEW YORK THEATRE

Man Puts Bullet Through Temple as Miss Vedder Sings "Maiden Fair."

New York, June 9. — A finely-dressed man of middle age, who was later identified as Charles Gilbert, rose in a box at the Columbia Theatre last night just before the close of the performance, and after listening to a song by Miss Fanny Vedder, slowly pulled a revolver from his pocket and shot himself in the right temple.

As the report sounded through the crowded theatre, everyone looked toward the box and saw the man fall forward, strike his hands against the railing and drop to the floor.

Some at first supposed that the incident was a part of the show, but as a man and woman in the box with the man fled and occupants of adjoining boxes also ran out they were aware that a tragedy had occurred.

The audience became excited, but their attention was partly diverted by the orchestra, which began playing national airs. Some of those seated nearest to the box rushed to it and assisting employees of the theatre to lift the stricken man. He was still conscious, and someone asked:

"Who shot you?"

There was no reply. The man only smiled faintly and pointed toward the revolver, which had fallen to the floor. "Did you shoot yourself?" demanded one of the attendants, but the man only shook his head, and in a moment grew limp.

The man had attracted attention to himself early in the night talking with a number of ticket speculators in front of the theatre. He seemed particular regarding where he should sit, and wanted to be located in a box in view of most of the audience. Being unable to secure a suitable seat from the brokers he finally went to the box office, and, after examining all the box seats that were still unsold, purchased one.

MUSIC AND HEALTH.

"Music washes away from the soul the dust of everyday life" by luring the thoughts away from such cares. In really listening to music we cease to think conscious thoughts, and the subconscious mind reigns, giving rest and asserting its recuperative powers as in sleep. Too much of music, active or passive, results in mental unbalance, even as too much of sleep results in abnormality. Musical biography presents very many instances of mental unbalance—a usurpation of power by the subconscious and the overthrow of reason which resides in the conscious. Here is the old problem of the mystic. In another guise, and as in his case so here—Judgment must prevail and reason must not be dethroned, however far intuition may be developed.

For most of us, however, no such grave dangers lurk in the development of our musical abilities, and we shall find ourselves better physically, more acute mentally, more elevated spiritually for having studied and listened.—The Nautilus.

Ha! Ha! He! He!

That's the way to feel—EVERY ONE does that takes a CASCARET night BEFORE, when he looks at the fellow who didn't. For OVER-EATING and DRINKING nothing on Earth cleans you out as a CASCARET, naturally—easily, without that upset sick feeling. Don't neglect—at bedtime—8 p.m., or 4 a.m.—no difference—you'll need it.
