Mrs. Whitefoot Has a Narrow Escape As She House Hunts

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.
Little Mrs. Whitefoot the Wood Mouse was very much upset by the news that Spooky the Screech Owl actually was living in the same tree that contained her own home and the home of little Mrs. Timmy the Flying Squirrel. It was the latter who had told Mrs. Whitefoot about Spooky. Mrs. Whitefoot had declared that she would move at once. Little Mrs. Timmy had gone on up to her own home high up in the tree, wondering if perhaps it wouldn't be wise for her to move also. But somehow she couldn't bear to think of moving again right away, so decided she would wait a bit.
Little Mrs. Whitefoot saw to it that her babies were fed and then she started out to look for a new home. Hardly had she left that tree when Redtail the Hawk spied her.

and all but caught her. It was just in the very nick of time that she saw a little hole in the ground and she dodged into it. "Oh!" panted little Mrs. Whitefoot, as she dodged into a little hole in the ground. "It is a under the roots of a tree. It is a lucky thing I didn't have one of those babies with me. It wouldn't been the end of both of us. I didn't suppose that fellow was anywhere around. I shall have to wait now to make quite sure that the way is clear."
So little Mrs. Whitefoot waited and waited. She would poke her pretty little head out and then draw it back seen. Finally she managed to get courage enough to come wholly out. She saw nothing of Redtail and started on to look for a new home. But she had gone only a short distance when the rustle of a leaf caught her to turn her head quickly. There was Reddy Fox. He saw her just as she saw him. Now Reddy Fox can move more quickly than Reddy Fox. He was just about two good where Mrs. Whitefoot had been. But she wasn't there. She had been quite as quick as Reddy. Instead of running away from him, she had darted straight towards him. For there was a little hole in the ground that she knew of there. Reddy had thought that if she ran at all she would run away from him, and that if he missed away from that second jump he would get her on the third. So he made that second jump before he realized that Mrs. Whitefoot was not running away from him. The result was that he jumped right over her. The very instant his feet touched the ground he saw Mrs. Whitefoot's long, slim tail disappear in that hole. Then you should have seen Reddy. My, how he made the dirt fly. But he didn't get little Mrs. Whitefoot. There was a little tunnel along foot. There was a little tunnel along which she ran. It led to an opening under a pile of brush. Peeping out from under this pile of brush she watched, until finally, Reddy gave up and went away. Then little Mrs. Whitefoot returned straight home. She had decided that this wouldn't be a good day to move.
