DEATH OF DR. C. M. BABCOCK.

Editor of Clark's Horse Review Passes Away at His Residence in Chicago.
Chicago, Nov. 29.—The death of Dr. C. M. Babcock, which occurred at his residence in Irving Park yesterday at 1.35 p.m., removes one of the most prominent turf writers of the present time. For nearly two years he has held the position of editor of Clark's Horse Review, one of the strongest of the turf press. Dr. Babcock was a native of Michigan and chose the practice of medicine as his profession. After graduating from Hahnemann College in this city he located at Columbus, Wis., where he practiced with marked success for many years. He had a penchant, however, for literary pursuits and had at one time contemplated entering the legal profession. His work as a writer was not confined to the horse world, but he had fitted himself to enter the field of journalism as editor of The Review. He was not in any sense a brilliant writer, but one who made sound logic his strongest point and dealt with abstruse questions in a manner suited to the general reading public. In an amateur way Dr. Babcock had attained something of a reputation as a musician and a composer, several of his hymns, anthems and choruses having been published and received with marked favor.

THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

Paris Clubmen Celebrate the Golden Anniversary of their Club's Establishment.
Paris, Oct. 29.—Last night at the Arlington Hotel the celebration of the 30th anniversary of the Paris Club was a grand success. The champion toast was responded to by H. Walker, sr., and George Bunnell, the only two who joined the club 22 years ago. The trophies of the club, consisting of the Ben Wyvies, which has just been awarded to the club after a dispute, and a dozen or more medals were placed as mementoes on the table, the Ontario Tankard banner being above the president's head.

TIGERS READY FOR THE BATTLE.

Princeton's Sturdy Lads Confident of Victory Over Yale at Manhattan Field—All are in Good Condition.

PRINCETON, N.J., Nov. 29.—The Princeton team had its last hard practice this afternoon, and everybody breathed freely when time was called, and no one was hurt. The men are in as good condition, physically, as could be expected, considering the amount of hard practice they have undergone the last few weeks.
The gates have been carefully guarded for the last week, so very little is known about the tricks and special plays. The coaches, when asked about the chances for the team on Thanksgiving Day, will say very little. Princeton is stronger this year than last. She is stronger, no doubt, than Harvard, and the only advantage Yale's favor lies in the fact that she has defeated Princeton the last three years; but this seems like a very small hook on which to hang much confidence.

Yale's Plans Practice.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 29.—Behind the closed gates of the Yale field the Yale eleven took its last practice of the year this afternoon. For about half an hour the team faced the second eleven just to try a few new plays which the coaches have worked out since the Harvard game. "Broncho" Armstrong was disabled at the very outset. He received a bad wrench of the left shoulder and left the practice. He was replaced by Hart, who far outplayed him.
There is a fair prospect that Hart may play half back during a good part of the Princeton game. He has been striking the line lately with more power than Armstrong, who proved unsatisfactory as a ground runner in both the Harvard and the Pennsylvania games.
Armstrong's shoulder is very sore to-night, but he expects to be in the game on Thursday.

SHOOTING IN THE SLEET.

Continuation of the Woodbine Tournament Yesterday.

The shooting tournament at the Woodbine was continued yesterday, but under very disagreeable conditions. The snow of early morning turned to rain about the time shooting commenced, and continued so steadily and hard as to necessitate a postponement about 3 o'clock till this morning. The shooting will commence this morning at 9 o'clock. Only one contestant has so far had success in making a straight score of 20, Mr. Sontag of Victoria, B.C., and he is very likely to carry off the first prize of $100.

Following was the score made yesterday:

First event—D. Black 17, D. Casey 15, McMorris 16, T. Herbert 13, J. Bellamy 14, U. C. Eddy 15, H. George 16, R. Smith 15, C. Hardy 15, M. Reardon 16, C. Ayre 15, W. Emmott 19, C. Morris 16, G. V. Sontag 20, A. Emond 16, G. Margolis 16, J. E. Blackall 16.

The Prize Cup Has Been Won.

Mr. John Russell has lost his imported black cock mare, Ada Louise, winner of every prize for which she was entered. She was out at Markham for the winter. The mare was 10 years old, imported by John Holderness, and valued by Mr. Russell at $1000.

Athensmen vs. Victorians.

The bowling match between these two clubs, which was to have been played yesterday, was postponed on account of the weather to Dec. 7.

Sporting Notes.

Prof. Popp & McDoyle's Academy, No. 13 St. Roch's square, in rear of the House, Yonge-street, tonight there will be a glove contest between Joe Burkhardt of Philadelphia and Jack Connors of New York, whom they will be assisted by the best talent in the city. Admission 25c. Start at 8 sharp.

True Merit Always Recognized.

A well-known society lady in Montreal, a few days ago, spoke as follows: "For many years, during the autumn, winter and spring seasons, I have been subject to sore throat and hoarseness. Up to a year ago I found great difficulty in getting rid of this throat trouble. I consulted physicians and used many preparations without success. A year ago I was induced by a clergyman to give your Harvard bronchial syrup a trial. I have been astonished and delighted with its effects, and am thankful that I now can use such effective relief. The syrup is quick relief, is pleasant to the taste, and never disappoints me. I have used my influence with several of my friends to have them keep Harvard bronchial syrup in their homes all the year round."

THEY EAT TOO MUCH ARSENIC.

Australian Women Sacrifice Health and Hair on the Altar of Good Complexion.

The majority of the female beauties of Sydney, according to an English observer, have peculiarly delicate complexions, languid expressions, fragile physique, and a dewy look in the eyes, which are more suited to the enervated temperament of an old civilization than the active vitality of a new world. It was easy even for the novice to detect that these ladies owed a good deal to their perianth. The mystery of this curious combination of premature oldness and unusual delicacy of complexion was explained by the fact that these women ate arsenic in order to produce the aristocratic pallor, more languid, and found to their horror that another effect of the drug was to make the hair drop out. Valuing their complexions above their hair, however, they sacrificed the one to the other. What a woman will endure for her complexion may be estimated by the fact that these arsenic eaters rarely live past 45. There is no pleasure, moreover in the consumption of the poisonous drug. The arsenic is made up into dainty looking caramels, which fashionable ladies will produce from precious little bonbonnières and suck quietly, just as the American girl chews gum or the English girl chocolate. The arsenic question, the Englishman says, was becoming quite a burning one in the antipodes. When a married young looking, lovely creature, adorned with luxurious ringlets, was as disgusted to find after the ceremony that she was really a semi-bald, prematurely enervated woman, who was losing her life to please her husband, and was incapable of fulfilling the duties of a mother to debilitated children which she brought into the world. Moreover, the suffering which she would go through in any attempt to overcome this pernicious habit was quite enough to make her break down. If, indeed, she could be persuaded to bear it at all.

The Chameleon.

is a curious animal, and is now worn as an ornament by ladies and gentlemen. The Student's Mixture Tobacco is a curious blend of fragrant tobacco and is very popular. Ask for it.
Blissfulness and liver complaint are always cured when Burdock Blood Purifiers, the best liver regulator, is used.

SINCERITY.

A Phase of Character Always Accorded Respect.

Truth is very often used as a synonym for sincerity, so also is honesty or frankness. Sincerity embraces something more than simple truth or frankness. For the truth, in words, sometimes conceals intention or feeling, while sincerity reveals the soul of man. It has an other quality. The sincere man is always earnest. Sincerity is foreign to the nature of one who is honest in mind and intention, free from simulation or hypocrisy. Confessions held sincerely in such high esteem as to declare it the way to heaven and the attainment of sincerity the duty of man. How the world regards it may be judged by the tolerance shown to one who is esteemed sincere, no matter how objectionable his opinions or principles may be. Steele remarked, with some truth, that "the happy talent of pleasing either those above or below you, seems to be widely owing to the opinion they have of your sincerity." There need be no more said in honor of it than that it is what forces the approbation of your opponents.

The converse of this presents more familiar examples which will occur to any one. An insincere man, or one who is thought to be insincere, is never successful in any matter he may try to convey a favorable impression. His praise is regarded as a mere flattery, and his purpose, and those who are praised feel like resenting the impertinence instead of being gratified by the compliment. The insincere man cannot be trusted. He has a false heart, is hypocritical, and is generally weak in his sincerity in many cases, though they may, as they very often do, become fanatical. Sincerity overtakes a multitude of mental faults.

To cultivate sincerity in those whose characters are not yet formed one must instill not merely lessons in truth and honesty, but lessons in bravery. Sincerity should never be put on as a cloak; it should be a natural result of a healthy heart, of a sincere mind and heart. The child who is to be sincere must be earnest of purpose, morally brave, true of heart, and should not be taught to seek sincerity, but to develop the qualities of which it is the natural fruit.—Baltimore Sun.

Beauty at Fifty.

It is a common experience for a young woman to say: "How fine-looking Mrs. A is! She must have been a beautiful girl!" And to hear the reply: "No, she was not nearly as good-looking in her youth as she is now. Her beauty has developed with her years." And it may have been observed that this is said oftentimes of women of high character.

Nobility will tell upon the outward aspect. The carriage of the figure, the pose of the head, the expression of the face—these come to reveal more and more, with the lapse of time, the inner life. There is something more than a mere pretty pretense intended in that part of the Little Minister where we read of "the beautiful face that God gives to all who love him and follow his commandments." Unselfishness, sincerity, thoughtfulness, refinement—all of these graces of character which are worth so much more than mere outward shape and color—and their charm to those who have consistently cherished them, until at 50 they may really become beautiful.

It is noticeable that art is more and more recognizing this idea. Some of the most famous pictures are those which, without presenting a single figure of great physical beauty, illustrate the nobility of the heart. Such is "The Breaking of Home Time," which has attracted so much attention at Chicago recently; also, "The Mourning Brave" and "Requiescens." "Requiescens" (though a dog was here the touching exponent of a grand quality), and that wonderful "Last Minute" at the Academy are incentives to true feeling and to nobler endeavor. The beauty which appeals merely to the eye must be less real and less impressive than that which strikes upon the heart and often thrills it to its core.

Conversely, mean traits of character—selfishness, parsimony, irritability, ignoble curiosity, envy, jealousy—shadow the face of their owner, more and more as time goes on, reminding one of the old man in Evangelina, whose "thoughts were congealed into lines on his face, as they freeze in fantastic shapes on the window-panes in the winter."
An old person who possesses low qualities, no matter how handsome he may have been in his prime, becomes repulsive in his old age.
The poets have not neglected to make mention of the charms which old age may reveal. There are many passages which will occur to any one who takes the trouble to reflect on the subject, but one in special is so fine that it ought to be quoted:
Youth, large, lively, loving, full of grace, force, fascination,
And again, of an old woman's face,
What wonders are there beyond any before!
What bloom, more than the bloom of youth!
—Lear's Lear.

Cottolene

A SHORTENING.

Down the street through the busy way A lady passed on marketing day. Who, passing at a grocery store, Stepped quickly in at the open door. With bated breath and anxious mien She queried: "have you COTTOLENE?"

The grocer, leaving off his work, Interrogated every clerk; But none up to that time had seen An article named "COTTOLENE."

"What is it?" said he to the dame, "That answers to this curious name. What is it made of? What's its use? My ignorance you'll please excuse."

"You're not the merchant for my dimes, I see you're quite behind the times. For COTTOLENE, I'd have you know, Is now the thing that's all the go. An article of high regard; A beautiful substitute for lard. Its composition pure and clean; For cooking give me COTTOLENE."

As from his store the lady fled, The grocer gently scratched his head— On his next order, first was sent, "One dozen cans COTTOLENE."
