24^{hr} Emergency Assistance Centre

Peace of mind means more than just financial security. It means having around-the-clock access — wherever you are — to healthcare professionals and trained staff to assist you in time of need.

Your TravelEase Emergency Health Insurance for Travellers policy provides you with a 24-hour Emergency Assistance Centre, which provides up front payment and multi-lingual assistance with such tasks as locating local doctors and hospitals, helping your spouse or family if you're ill, and handling a lost or stolen passport. It's the perfect travel companion!

This is NOT a contract. A written contract containing benefits, together with exclusions and limitations will be sent to you upon enrolment or upon request.

Judicial Process

Never assume that the legal system of the country you're visiting is the same as at home. "Innocent until proven guilty" isn't a universally recognized concept. In some countries, you may not even have the right to legal representation or a trial in your mother tongue.

Some countries don't recognize or respect religious freedom, freedom of association, speech or the press, or equality of the sexes. For instance, guilt by association is presumed in some countries. This means that you may be charged simply for being in the company of a person suspected or found guilty of a crime.

Even if you're an innocent bystander at a demonstration or riot you may be considered a participant and rounded up with those involved. Your Canadian citizenship does not grant you immunity.

If you do find yourself in legal trouble, contact the nearest Canadian mission immediately. If you cannot do so yourself, have someone else do it for you.

Mail

If you are travelling for an extended period of time, you can arrange to have your mail sent to a post office box or, where possible, to the nearest Canadian mission. In the latter case, the mission will hold on to letter-size mail (not parcels) for you to pick up in person. This mail cannot be forwarded to another address.

Travel to the United States

Because of our close relationship with our neighbours to the south, we sometimes forget that we're visiting a foreign country. The same preparations should be made for visiting the United States as for travelling to any other country. And it should be remembered that U.S. laws and customs are different from ours at home.
