Ottawa, Canada, October 27th, 1885.

“Relative to the emigrants sent out by you, on their arrival here I placed them in the employment of Messrs. H—— Bros., Hawkesbury, Ontario, to work in their saw-mills at fifteen dollars per month, together with board. . . . I have no doubt they will make their way in Canada, as others have done before them.” In another letter Mr. Willis refers to two other of the Society’s emigrants receiving ten and twelve dollars per month, with board, i.e., £2 and £2 8s.

Kingston, Ontario, Canada, June 5th, 1885.

“The men you sent to me were all respectable, steady men, so far as I could judge; and at any time between now and August I could obtain employment for good, steady, single men within a few days of their arrival. If I had fifteen able-bodied men to-day they could all get work at saw-mills.”

In another letter, October 9th, 1885, he adds:—“For the coming year you may send me as many good farm labourers as you choose, also as many good general female servants of good character; as to mechanics I cannot say at present—bricklayers can generally get work if they do not arrive too early. I will do all I can to assist in your good work.”

With one exception, they are all with the farmers to whom I first introduced them, and after being tried for a month or two have been hired for a year, the wages given being 100 dols. (£20) per annum and board. In the exception to which I have referred, the fault was rather with the farmer than the servant; they did not agree about wages, after two months’ trial, and the man left the place and got an engagement at once with a neighbour, who thought that farmer No. 1 was seeking him to work for less wages than the man was fairly entitled to. He is now in a good place and doing well. The men have all done very well indeed, and are giving good satisfaction to their employers, and are likely to do well for themselves. They have all been perfectly sober, and seem
