"We are more than pleased with the results of our campaign for greater production in London," said Mr. Manness. "The way the people responded was simply magnificent. Every little odd corner apparently was planted with something. Potatoes seemed to be the most popular vegetable to grow."

Some citizens made real sacrifices to grow potatoes and other vegetables. Lawns were plowed up and backyards which had been the pride of households were ruthlessly spaded up and "murphys" planted. phys" planted.
