elaborate character. The mayor, speaking on behalf of the police commissioners, felicitated considerably on the efficiency of To-ronto's police force, which had also lent a dignity to and maintained a most creditable order in the "God-forsaken" City of Quebec during the tercentenary. The public had practically gotten rid of all the pick-pockets. It was the duty of the city council to give the police-men and firemen the best of every-thing that went to make life comfort-able, he said. In the next year it would likely be necessary to erect two or three more such buildings in the city.
