"THE LATE TENANT"

By GORDON HOLMES

The next instant he smiled, thinking: "Nonsense! It must have been here before. Each time I came in I was smoking; the air is frosty, too."

He groped inward for the switch, turned on the light, and, without designing to give another thought to the smell of violets, turned to the left along the main corridor, which was rectangular to the entrance-hall. Passing the drawing-room door, he entered the dining-room. Opposite the latter was the kitchen and servant's apartments. Around the other end of the main corridor were disposed three bedrooms and a bathroom. The light had turned on illuminated entrance and corridor alike.

In the dining-room he found the fire still burning. That was good. The coal-scuttle was not by the fire-place, but in a corner. He went to get a shovelful of coal; and as he stooped, again came to him the fragrance, thrilling, bringing with it a picture of a girl whom he had once seen lying in funeral state, surrounded by flowers, and clothed in the last robes of earth.

David stabled the coals with the shovel. "What's wrong with me?" he half laughed. Yet his eyes sought the crayon drawing of Gwendoline Barnes.

Presently he lit a cigar, unfolded an evening paper which he had bought in the streets, and tried to take an interest in the news of this new-old world into which he was new-born.

But his mind wandered. Without he heard the distant rumble of traffic; hansom wheels were beginning to arrive in the street beneath; he heard doors slam; the jingling of bells on head-stalls; feet patter across the pavement; a driver's tongue-click, and away would jog a horse, to be stirred, perhaps, into sudden frenzy by two shriels of a far-off whistle.

A contrast, these sounds, to the twing snapping and grass-rustling of a night on the plains! There, lying by the camp-fire embers, he had heard the coyote slinking past in the dark, while the tethered horses suspended their cropping to hearken. Here men and dogs made a yet stranger wilderness. He sat over the hearth absorbed by it, already yielding his tribute to the greatness of the outer ocean of life.

But prairie or city, man must sleep. David rose and went to the sideboard for a decanter. A certain graceful aloofness characterized his movements. Townbred men might have been deceived thereby, might reason that he was lethargic, or strapping physique, certainly, yet a man who could be hit three times before he was counted once. It is this error of judgment which leads to accidents when town-dwellers encounter the denizens of the jungle. Harcourt's hand was outstretched for the decanter when he became aware that he was not alone in the flat. The knowledge was derived from neither sight nor sound. It was intuitive, a species of feeling through space, an imperative consciousness that he shared his suite of apartments with another distinct, in-tangible, being. Many men might not have had it, but Harcourt had it clearly.

Instantly he was rigid. This time he was waving no fantasy round a white of violets. The sense of nearness to other presence is really inherent in man. Residence in settled communities dulls it, but David Harcourt it was a living faculty. He stood motionless, waiting for some simple proof of his belief.

The door, veiled by a portiere, was not closed, but sufficiently closed to prevent any view of the corridor, which, otherwise, it commanded throughout. The fat was carpeted so thickly that movement was silenced. But David fancied that a woman's dress did brush forward and pull against wall or floor. That was enough. He was about to spring forward and pull the door open to see, when he heard, or thought that he heard, the switch of the light outside click, as if it had been carefully raised. And on the instant, without hesitation, he pushed up the switch in the dining-room, and hid himself in darkness. There are wolves, too, in the London desert.

Now, like a bush-cat, he crept to the door, opened it, and peeped out. Certainly the light which he had left burning had been extinguished by some hand; the corridor was in darkness.

Nerves, as commonly understood, did not much enter into Harcourt's scheme of things. But his heart beat quicker. The speed of thought cannot be measured. Many questions, and one doubt, one question, fitted through his brain. He stood

WHAT MANY MEN NEED

Dr. Hamilton Has a Prescription That "Sets" You Right Up.

When a man has lost ambition to "dig in" and stay at things—when he complains of headaches, fullness in the right side, pains in the shoulder blade—it's purely a case of "Liver."

These symptoms invariably indicate a clogged, inactive liver. The body can't get rid of its wastes, and the whole system is half paralyzed.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills stimulate the liver into activity in one night. Being a mild vegetable laxative they produce results in a few hours. The bilious headache and constipation are cured, spirits rise, complexion clears, animation returns. Nothing in the calendar so efficient for that tired lazy feeling as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Very mild, don't interfere with work, invariably do lots of good. Try a 25c. box, all dealers.

SON SHOT BY HIS MOTHER

Curt Klein, Trying to Prevent Suicide, Got Bullet in His Head.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—In attempting to prevent his mother from shooting herself, as he thought she was about to do, Curt Klein, 16 years old, received a bullet wound in his own head, in a furnished room house in Second Avenue. He was taken at once to Bellevue Hospital and will probably die. His mother was locked up, charged with felonious assault.

Friction between Mr. and Mrs. Klein over the management of the house, the police say, induced Mrs. Klein to attempt suicide as alleged. Mrs. Klein, it is charged, ran into her son's room and drawing a revolver from under her apron exclaimed: "Well, I'm going to end it all now."

With a cry the boy leaped from the bed where he had been sitting, and rushing to her caught her arm and tried to wrest the revolver from her. In the struggle the weapon was discharged and a bullet struck the lad behind the right ear. The father and some roomers rushed in and disarmed Mrs. Klein, who fainted when she saw her boy lying wounded on the floor.

MONEY MARKET

No Immediate Advances in Bank Rates Looked For—Call Money May Harden.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—On both sides of the Atlantic the money markets are coping satisfactorily with the September needs and no immediate advances in bank rates are looked for. Foreign exchange continues favorable to New York, and if necessity should arise gold could doubtless be drawn from Europe. The increase of $80,000,000 in the loans and discounts, as disclosed in the returns issued by the Comptroller of the Currency, from September a year ago is largely attributable to the liquidation that has taken place in our debt abroad. Moreover, Europe is confidently expected to be an eager buyer of our cotton and our cereals before many weeks pass, so that New York will be-and-by be able to strengthen its position materially. Investigations are still in progress, but a saner view is now taken of the administration's policy; instead of unreasoning wailing, there is a disposition to regard the ultimate outcome as of lasting benefit to the country's institutions. It will not be surprising if call money rates show a tendency to harden, since the low rates of last month were the result largely of the distrust that impelled bankers to husband their resources. So long as call money remains below the legal rate, no hardship will be inflicted upon anyone; it would be well were time money to reap the benefit of returning confidence for assuredly commercial interests are compelled to pay uncomfortably high rates at this moment.

THOUGHT STRYCHNINE WAS BUT FRUIT SYRUP

Consequently Two Nova Scotia Men Are Dead From Drinking It

Halifax, Sept. 22.—Dr. J. L. Peppard, of Great Village, and Samuel Lindsay, of Londonderry Station, died from the effects of poisoning Saturday afternoon. The men were at work harvesting oaks and becoming thirsty, went to the house for a drink of buttermilk. When entering the door the doctor said "We'll have something better than buttermilk," so they went into the office. On the shelf were two bottles, one containing strychnine and the other fruit syrup.

When the men had quenched their thirst they went back to the field. Dr. Peppard was driving the rake when he reeled and fell from the seat, calling to the boy who was working with him to get him a drink of mustard and warm water. The boy ran to the house but in his excitement, forgot the message. Mrs. Peppard came running to her husband's assistance but before she could do anything for him he was dead.

In the meantime Samuel Lindsay, who was working in another part of the field, became sick. He was taken to the house, where he lingered until about 5 o'clock on Saturday. Lindsay belonged to Londonderry Station.

The steamer Scotia, which was libelled to the admiralty court at Halifax, has been released.

WILL PROBE BOOKS OF STANDARD OIL CO.

Hearing of Suit to Dissolve Company Has Been Adjourned Until Monday With This in View

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The adjournment until Monday of the hearing of the government's suit to dissolve the Standard Oil Company will give the government's expert accountants another day in which to obtain figures from the books containing the records of the Standard Oil Company in the period from 1882 to 1892. These records will probably lead to an interesting line of questioning next week by Francis B. Kellogg, the government's chief counsel. It is likely that when the hearing is resumed next week, Wesley H. Tilford, treasurer of the Standard Oil Company, will again take the stand.

N. E. Bemish, one of the leading men in the export department here of the Standard Oil Company, is wanted by the government as a witness, but Mr. Kellogg learned from Mr. Tilford that Mr. Bemish is in the Far East and will not return for ten months or more.

VALUABLE PAINTINGS DAMAGED

PARIS, Sept. 21.—Two more well known pictures in the Louvre galleries have been damaged by vandals. The paintings are Daubigny's landscape called "The Harvest" and a well known impressionist work called "Maid-Olympia." The vandalism was committed in spite of the elaborate precautions of the Louvre officials to protect the paintings in the galleries from such attacks.

Steamer Ocampo, Captain Buchanan, from the West Indies with mail, passengers and general cargo, arrived Saturday with twenty-six passengers. She cleared for Halifax and the West Indies.
