If Our Men Have Offered Lives, Surely We Can Offer Money

(Canadian Finance.)

If you cannot fight, unite with other Canadians to make a victory of the Victory Loan. Surely if 40,000 of our best and bravest men have volunteered to give their lives, at least that many of use at home will volunteer to lend our moniey. It is not much to ask—and yet only 40,000 of us subscribed to the previous loan. All preceding Canadian loans have been subscribed to the previous loan. All preceding Canadian loans have been subscribed to the previous loan. All preceding Canadian loans have been subscribed by individent to charge. The least of Alberta, well says: "The time has come when the people must subscribe. We want to come as near as possible to having at least one bond allotted to each man, woman, boy and girl in the west. Each must do his or her share in this crisis. You cannot do it by idlenses. Out" Next Spring

Washington, Nov. 26—If the future of major league baseball depends upon special draft exemptions for major league players, war department officials were inclined to think that organized baseball will "strike out" next spring. Provost Marshal General Crowder, who is in command of the selective draft administrative forces, when told that President Ban Johnson of the American League proposed to put the fu-erican League proposed to put the fu-ture of the major leagues up to the government on an appeal for exemption of eighteen men for each major league team, expressed considerable astonish-

"That must be a pipe dream," said

"That must be a pipe dream," said the general. "There certainly is no warrant in the law for exempting baseball players from the draft and there is nothing in the regulations to warrant making exceptional rulings for men liable to service who make baseball their means of livelihood. It is absurd.
"I have heard nothing officially about such a proposition coming from the baseball executive, and it is certain that exemption for ball players can be granted only for cause, arrespective of their occupation."

"Equerry Airman."

Amsterdam, Nov. 28-Baron von Richthofen, Germany's star airman, who is at home on long leave, has just been married to Fraulein von Minkwitz, the millionaire heiress daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg's Master of Horse. On the occasion of the marriage, the emperor appointed Richthofen his "Equerry Airman," and it is said that in consequence of this appointment he will henceforth devote his time entirely to the training of new faltice.

PROHIBITION RULE

Of the late Hon. A. R. McClelan, now hangs upon a legal decision.

The trustees under the will, Hon. C. W. Robinson and Abner E. Bartlett, applied to Justee White in the chancers out on Tuesday for advice as to the construction of a clause in the will whereby the residue of the estate of the late Mr. McClelan, thought to amount in the will whereby the residue of the estate of the late Mr. McClelan, thought to amount and the experience gained during that time, his is a verdict that cannot be impugned. The officer in question is a keen observer of human nature and a man whose disposition it is to have regard for the well being of others.

In speaking of the situation to The great number of human parasites who used to loiter about a certain section of the city. Their sole aim from morning till night was to procure enough money to purchase a beer or two. The greater part of the time they were under the will be related to the considerably in hours off duty. These men were a sore affliction to their families. From their place of employment they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to their saloon, and from the seloon they went to their saloon, and from the seloon they went to their saloon, and from the seloon they went to their saloon, and from the seloon they went to their saloon, and from the seloon they went to their saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon, and from the seloon they went to the saloon.

duty. These men were a sore affliction to their families. From their place of employment they went to the saloon, and from the saloon they went to their home intoxicated, without enough of their salary left to provide necessaries for themselves and their families.

The police officer was amazed at the great improvement. Habitual drunkards had ceased to be sluggards. Workmen who spent most of their wages in liquor, now showed a prosperous condition. Their families, too, showed little sign of want. And the best feature of it, was, the officer remarked, that the men themselves appreciated their elevation into decent society.

The benefits from prohibition did not end here, the officer continued. Quite logically, he pointed out, these changes for the better would be more apparent among the workingmen who formerly were openly enebrlates. Besides these—and no one knows it better than the police officer—there was a class of secret drunkards. They indulged probably to an equal extent but they exercised diplomacy in keeping out of public view. The improvement among the working people, he believed, was a truthful estimate of the improvement all around.
