LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY Self-Styled Son of King Edward VII Again in the Lime-Light

Some three or four years ago a man who claimed to be a son of King Edward VII. by a secret marriage contracted prior to his union with Queen Alexandra, occupied a considerable amount of attention in the American press, by reason of his pretentious pretensions, and his swindles, which led to his frequent arrests.

It was a "medical man" that he first incurred in 1897, legal prosecution at the hands of the New York County Medical Society, through his endeavors to win the $1,000,000 that Charles Broadway Ross offered to any physician who would restore his sight.

Rousé prudently selected a substitute for experimentation, a blind man named John Martin. The treatment consisted in pouring water, said to be from India, on the patient's head, and rubbing it in.

President George F. Kutz, and the other officers of the American Science and Civic Preservation Society, are not quite correct when they state in their interesting "Memorial" which they have compiled on the history of Philippe Manors, at Yonkers, New York, that Maria, a niece of George Washington's old maid, became the Viscountess of Strangford during the days of the British occupation of New York in 1776.

The elder of these two brothers, George, seventh Viscount, was an intimate associate of the late Duke of Rutland and of Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield, and is generally understood to have been the original of "Conningsby," the hero of the late novel of that name.

His younger brother and successor, eighth and last Viscount Strangford, was during all his earlier years almost blind, which did not, however, prevent him from becoming a distinguished diplomatist, one of the most remarkable students of Oriental lore in England. He spent many years, both prior and subsequent to his accession to the peerage, at Constantinople, where he mingled, often in Turkish costume, with the natives, and more particularly with the Moslem ecclesiastics.

This Year By RUTH CAMERON

Did you know that cerise and purple were an exquisite color combination? I never knew it before, but I have just acquired that information, and it is such a surprise to me that I want to share it. It was supplied to me by a young friend of mine who has a reputation for good dressing, and was imparted apropos of a large hat, composed chiefly of purple violets and trimmed with two cerise plumes. I commented upon the hat as an outrage of good taste, and my companion seemed much surprised. "Why, I think that's pretty," she said. "You know cerise and purple are all right together this year."

What, I wonder, has the year 1912 done to deserve that laws of nature should be suspended this year? For surely that must have happened last year and forever before. Despite the shop girl's emphasis before, cerise and purple is a combination to make even the least aesthetic shudder. This year it produces a harmony, a successful harmony, by my inability to admire this combination that I am a dowdy-minded person who does not like stylish things. I think I appreciate a truly stylish hat, and a hat that transforms many things. For instance, it can make a bath towel desirable material for a gown. But this time even the decrees of fashion cannot change.

For instance, I do not think that anything can make cerise and purple harmonious. And again, I refuse to be convinced, when I am told that an indecently peck-a-boo waist is all right this year. I do not think that even the dictates of fashion can make immediately modest.

Yet, again, when I go to buy china and am told that octagonal dishes are the prettiest thing nowadays, I beg to disagree. I remember "Curved is the line of beauty, straight is the line of duty," and prefer to have the dishes I am to live with for the next ten or twenty years exhibit the lines of beauty.

Yet one more example. When I see a very thin woman accentuating her thinness by dressing in an indecently skimpy gown and wearing, perhaps, no petticoats at all, I cannot think that even the fact that she is stylish this year makes her conduct good taste or appearance attractive.

Fashion is a wonderfully powerful force, and there are undoubtedly many things which it can influence, but there are also many laws of good taste, of artistic harmony, and of decency, with which it does not even the most emphatic demands of fashion should interfere.

In other words, there are some things which cannot possibly be right, proper or beautiful this year, any more than they have been for the last million years.

honor, are not nobiliary titles at all, are not used in society, and confer no official rank or precedence upon the holder. Harry S. H. Cavendish, the African explorer, who stands second in succession to the peerage of Lord Waterpark, has again been divorced, and, as on the previous occasion, on the ground of brutality, drunkenness and desertion. His wife was Isabelle Jay, the well-known actress, who on securing a dissolution of her marriage in 1906 returned to the stage. A year later he married his second wife who has just parted from him; but no mention is made of her name in the pages of "Burke," or other standard "Peerages." There is an American interest in this, for as long as Henry Cavendish remains without a son, the way to the Waterpark peerage and baronetcy remains open to the forty-year-old Henry Siegel Cavendish, grandchild of Henry Siegel of New York, and son of the late Myrrel Cavendish who lost his life in the Titanic disaster. His widow is Henry Siegel's only daughter.

Dominion Note Popular Ottawa, Aug. 8.—The $5 Dominion note has met with a hearty welcome. Up to the present the circulation of these notes is $6,300,000. One development is that the total value of Dominion notes in circulation is little changed, the banks having substituted the new notes for the much larger certificate of gold deposits which pass only between banks.

Don't Pull Out The Gray Hairs A Few Applications of a Simple Remedy Will Bring Back The Natural Color

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place" is an old saying, which, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that Nature's help is assistance. It is Nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, are all signs of a general decline in vitality, and there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be falling or dead, some good, old-fashioned hair-restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the famous "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Restorer," which our grand- and parents used. The best preparation of this kind is Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Restorer, a preparation of domestic sage and Sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Weyth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Restorer at once, and in a few days the treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

SUFFRAGISTS REPLY TO ATTACK OF LIQUOR DEALERS

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 8.—Officers of the Michigan Equal Suffrage Association, after the saloon dealers of the state met yesterday for the purpose of organizing against woman suffrage, issued the following statement: "The right of women to vote does not depend upon their views on the saloon. The campaign for woman suffrage is not being waged upon the temperance issue. Women will divide on that question just as men do."

Saloon men make a mistake in fighting woman suffrage. They may beat the cause but it will be a victory that will cost them dear. The liquor men do not seem to be able to get it through their heads that men as well as women are getting tired of the saloon in politics.

"If women have the right to vote they certainly should not be denied it because the saloon men are against it. Many voters, who may be indifferent to woman suffrage will be likely to vote for it just because the liquor interests are determined to defeat it."

It has been announced that the saloon men will hold another meeting here within thirty days.

In the gymnasium at Buckingham Palace in London is an upright measuring board, on which the children of the King and queen record their heights every 12 months. Each has a burning ambition to be tall, and there is said to be a keen rivalry among them as to who shall be the giant. Before the Prince of Wales left Paris the first time, his younger brother had a slight advantage of him in size. But during his absence he gained in width as well as in height. On his return, one of the first things the Prince and his sister did was to take measurements.

NEAL CURE

For Drink Habit No Hypodermic Injections—No Injury to Health

Stimulants afford only temporary relief to tired nerves. When a man gets to the point where he begins to feel that he needs a brace, before he tackles his job, he ought to regard that as a danger signal. The effect of the brace passes away. The craving grows on what it feeds on. Depression is sure to follow. Next time the drink will be bigger; then it will take two and next three to brace up the system to the striking point. The drink habit once acquired soon becomes the master of its victim. His friends fall from him and he goes downward. The road down hill is easy. It leads to unhappiness, to pauperism and to crime.

BUT—the habit can be cured. The poison can be eradicated from the system. Instead of a craving for liquor, a revulsion against it and a loathing for it may be set up. This has been demonstrated in the cases of over three thousand patients who have taken the Neal Cure.

The Neal Cure is not a Gold Cure. It has a remarkable record for consistently curing constipation, biliousness and indigestion, purifying the blood, banishing headaches and clearing the skin. 25c. a box everywhere.
