NOVEMBER.

The leaves are falling and falling.

The birds have ceased their chirping.

But he will tell you, my child—

Though day by day it grows,

Both darker and colder grow,

The roof of the bright blue sky

Will keep above the snow.

And when the winter comes,

The birds will get new leaves

The quail come back and the carves

The robin will war in the snow

A vast that is bright and warm

And the loveliest way-side blossoms

Will smile with the sun and the dew

The leaves will fall all white and dumb

But he will tell you, my darling,

The spring will be here again

There must be rough cold weather

And winds and snow and frost

Not all good things together

Come to us here, my child

So, when some dear boy loses

His way in the snow, my child

Think him the roose of the roose

Are he will tell you, my darling,

The spring will be here again

There are many excellent reasons

For not sleeping in a church. Here is a case in North Adams a comely young gentleman, upon awaking from his slumber, found his body, with many heartless neighbors enjoying the specimens of the human form.

An Iowa doctor approves of tight-lacing because it kills off the foolish and leaves only the sensible ones. "But if we depended altogether on such specimens, the world would be depopulated."

In Russia the authorities are empow-

M. Gustave Dore has been chosen to

The Express Callista is now so brought her husband to death by his treachery, is now her husband's murderer.

There is grief in store for teetotalers.

The tremulous forefinger of the drunkard shall be pointed at them derisively. For many years they have had him at their range. In tracts and books and lectures they have taunted him with the adventures of his favorite sippie. Was it London stout they told him of the "Swig" collected in dripping from the roof eaves, fortified with cayenne, and bottled for exportation. Was it ale?

They told him of the percentage of ethylalcohol that had been developed by the examination of the brewings.
