

Province in cases of sufficient magnitude and also by special leave from the Supreme Court of the Dominion.

"No feeling exists that this should be altered—occasionally of course the unsuccessful party to an appeal, and those who sympathize with him make a doleful noise against the Board but this speedily dies out.

It is wholly beyond controversy that Canadians generally would deplore any attempt to interfere with their traditional right to apply for justice to the foot of the throne.

"In other colonies the right continues in a more or less complete form—and from all appearances will so continue while the British Empire itself continues—and may that be not ad multos annos alone, but in aeternum."

Whatever may be the case in respect of private litigation, it seems to me that the Judicial Committee will have forever the task of determining controversies between the integral parts of the Empire.
