BRANTFORD, CANADA, MONDAY, JULY 6, 1914

No Time Limit, Says Sir Edward Carson' --- Trouble is Feared

LONDON, July 6.-Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, addressing a gathering of Unionists in South London, declared that Ulster would reject any proposals made by the Government placing a time limit of any sort on her exclusion from Home Rule.

"If ever we go into the Irish Parliament," he said, "we shall go in not at the point of the bayonet, but of our own free will."

People did not sufficiently realize, he said, that Home Rule had been passed, and could be brought into law on the presentation of the Act to the King. He presumed the Ministers, as straightforward, honest men, would tell the King that if he signed the bill there would be a serious commotion in North Ireland, and if he did not sign there would be similar commotion in the South and West. "Ulstermen," Sir Edward said, "have been making ready two years, and they are now ready. They want no makeshift Government, no six years' limit, no county limit. The sands are running out, I am being pressed forward, and I am prepared to go forward to the finish. I go to Ulster next week, and I hope to have tokens of peace. If not, we must only rely on ourselves, and we will. I will not shrink from it."

The machine flew steadily and but little adjustment of the rudder and aileron were required to offset the torque of the single propeller. It had been held by many that should one motor stop while the machine was in flight, it would be necessary t oshut down the air in order to avoid overturning the craft, but M. Curtiss flew with first one propellor stopped and then the other without affecting the machine's balance enough to be noticed by the crowd watching the flight. "She will fly strong with the pilots and twelve hour fuel," said Curtiss after the flight. The load carried was approxmately 1500 pounds which is equal to nearly twenty hours fuel and the pilots. FROM BIG FIGHT Declares That it Was Best Heavyweight Battle on Record.

[By Special Wire to the Courier] TORONTO, July 6 .- Tom Flanagan returned last night from Paris where he witnessed the Johnson-Moran fight. He says French and English newspapermen were admitted to the fight free, but American reporters were charged top prices, which he thinks may have inspired the charge that the fight was fixed, and other hostile comment.

'I never said what was published in the New York papers in reference to this," said Flanagan. 'I merely said I was present at the fight as an ordinary spectator, not in any official capacity, and I thought it was the best big men's battle I ever saw in my life.

"It was the best fight between heavyweights I ever saw. Wasp Skirt is Here-Wonder of Everyone On the Board Walk

ATLANTIC CITY, July 6.—It's here—the wasp skirt—exactly four gowns made in this style, which Paris last week declared to be the very latest, appeared to-day. Everybody looked and wondered, and women in particular cogitated among themselves whether this fashion of the 80's will become generally popular. It is doubtful.

Curving in at the normal waist line in most pronounced hour-glass fashion, this mode of 30 years ago to-day was revivied and exploited with a skirt of the present era, which seems to be neither one thing nor the other, but seems indicative of a gigantic effort to revive the hoop skirt modes. It is true that some of the smart shops along the boardwalk have been brave enough to offer hooped petticoats for sale, but these are merely cousins once removed from the original idea. The hoops or extenders are placed no lower than the knee, with the dangling fulness beneath-carefully concealed at the ankle with a most efficient elastic band.
