MANY DUCK FARMS.

Long Island is Famous as a Producer of Fine Ducks.

The Number Raised There is Indeed Enormous.

Long Island, N. Y., is famous as a producer of ducks. It contains many duck farms, including the most extensive plants for the purpose in the world. Several of the largest of these

DUCK KILLING AT SPEONK. places are situated in Great South Bay, near the villages of Moriches, Eastport, Speonk and Westhampton. There are 40 or more duck farms in this section of Suffolk county, and there are raised on them annually between 230,000 and 240,000 ducks. The illustration shows the method of killing and bleeding employed on these farms.

Two or More Cocks. Some writers recommend 25 hens and 2 cocks for a pen. It will not work. In large flocks with open range a plural number of cocks will work all right, for each of cocks will herd a flock of hens for his own amusement, but when confined two cocks will prosecute a war of extermination against each other if they are any good. Each one's theory is that the other is "not capable of self government" and therefore ought to be "exterminated."—Tennesse Farmer.

STORIES OF THE DAY

Governor Stone's Treatment of the Tired Veterans at the Capitol.

Owen Ochiltree, writing in the Philadelphia Inquirer, tells some interesting stories about Governor Stone, of Pennsylvania. Just before he was nominated for Governor, Colonel Stone distinguished himself in Washington. A decrepit veteran from Pennsylvania was hobbling on crutches through the Capitol on a sightseeing expedition. He became tired, and seeing a row of six unoccupied benches in the rotunda, he sat down to rest. A policeman instantly made for him. "Get up from there," he commanded. "Don't you see that sign up there?" pointing to a legend which told the story: "These benches exclusively for ladies." The veteran protested that he was tired out, and that as the benches were not in use he felt that an old man who had lost a leg in his country's defense might be permitted to use a small space on one of them. "It makes no difference," declared the policeman. "My orders from the Police Board are to keep men out of these seats. You must move on."

The old soldier gathered up his crutches and prepared to move on just as Colonel Stone came passing through. The Colonel is a veteran himself, and seeing a comrade in distress, he inquired the cause. The veteran explained and Colonel Stone lost his temper. "Sit right down again on that bench," he exclaimed, "and stay there until you get rested." Then, turning to the policeman, the Colonel denounced his conduct in rather strong language, and added that he would have taken down the sign if he had to get a resolution through the House to do it. The officer walked off and left the Colonel swapping war reminiscences on the "Ladies' Bench."

Some time around 1880 two men sat in the smoking car of a train bound from Philadelphia to Harrisburg. They were both big, stout men. It was night time; they were alone, and the desire for conversation seemed about to strike each of them at the same time, for they arose simultaneously. "I was about to remark," said the first man, "that my name is Stone, and I come from Allegheny." "I was about to remark," said the other, "that my name is Hastings and that I hail from Center."

Soon after that Stone became United States District Attorney for Western Pennsylvania and Hastings became Adjutant General of the State. Then later still they became Governor—that is, one at a time.

A writer in the New York Press says of Hugh J. Grant, ex-Mayor of New York, and Ulysses S. Grant, Jr.: It is not a bit odd that they should have been chums at college. Neither of them drew men together. One day, long after they had cut their political eye teeth, after Hugh was Sheriff, "Buck" said, as they strolled down Broadway: "Hugh, why is it you are so modest?" With a sly twinkle the future Mayor replied: "Modesty doesn't do a man any harm in politics." Hugh Grant may have an "easy" look about his face, but he can hold his own with the shrewdest. Naturally warm-hearted he is as cold as business as Russell Sage. At poker he is a recognized past-master. I have yet to see the man who can out-hold him, lay "em down quicker when he's hot, bet 'em harder when he's cool, and gather in the pot with a more regretful air. His skin being clear and his blood clean, he can blush like a sensitive girl still tied to mother's apron strings. But, brethren, don't let that blush fool you!

Robert Barr, the novelist, is a great joker. J. P. Austin, an English writer tells how Barr worried a waiter. He says: "I was finishing breakfast one morning about luncheon time at a table in the pleasantest window. He came from the doorway and said to a waiter: 'I want that table for some friend who is coming to lunch at once. Who's the man sitting there?' 'I'll turn him out!' So he strode up to me with a fierce expression, followed by the protesting waiter, and said: 'Look here, you've had this table quite long enough. Ain't you finished to be breakfasting at this hour?' The terrified servant evidently expected bloodshed. Perhaps he was a diligent reader of my friend's tales and thought he was going to see one of them transacted in real life with the assistance of a corpse and serviettes all over his face."

A niece of Attorney General CIGES, Miss Elizabeth A. Curtis, is one of the latest translators of Omar Khayyam. At a recent reception given in her honor by her uncle she overheard one prominent society woman inquire of another as to who Omar was. "Oh!" replied the woman addressed. "He is a new colored poet like Paul Dunbar."

Nice for the Necktie Wearer. A rather loudly-dressed gentleman stepped into the necktie department of a big shop the other afternoon and in a supercilious tone that would have nettled a graven image into anger, uttered the simple mandatory word: "Neckties!" Then he threw back his head as if the assistant was entirely beneath his notice. This top-lofty air aggravated the assistant, but he quietly displayed a number of late patterns with a deferential air. "These," said he, obsequiously, "are the very newest things, and are excellent quality at a shilling." "A shilling!" haughtily snapped the customer; "a shilling! Do I look like a man who would wear a shilling necktie? Is there anything about me to indicate that I—?" "Excuse me," he murmured, with the hauteur that was the one drawback to her charm, "but you'll have to see the coachman."

Slightly Off. "Aniline Munnysburn," he screamed in a paroxysm of agony, "you will drive me to drink!" "Excuse me," she murmured, with the hauteur that was the one drawback to her charm, "but you'll have to see the coachman."

A BABY BOY.

Every expectant mother in the world will sympathize with the somewhat remarkable experience of Mrs. Walker, of Fillmore, Montgomery Co., Ill.

"I take pleasure in dropping you a word of praise," she writes in an interesting letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., "in regard to your wonderful medicine and what it has done for me. I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription' in October. I took two bottles, and on the first of January following I gave birth to a nine-and-a-half pound boy, and was only in labor half an hour. There was no one with me at the time of confinement but my husband. I would advise expectant mothers to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for a medicine that will preserve life. I am getting so I can do some of my own work without getting tired."

Sensitive, ailing women deserve the true sympathy and helpfulness that can only be extended to them by a physician whose wide experience renders him deeply appreciative of their sufferings and thoroughly familiar with the means of prompt alleviation and cure. You may write Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for a medicine that will preserve life. I am getting so I can do some of my own work without getting tired."

That is the Secret of one Woman's Popularity. Comforts for the Sick Room—Gold Mouchoir Bags—Simp's Remedy for a St.

An extremely popular woman was once asked the secret of her social success and she smiled gently as she shrugged her shoulders and uttered one sentence: "I feed my guests." And it was really so. She welcomed all guests to every meal and served luncheons and suppers without stint. No guest without a dessert. She was fond of people and had no other attraction, no beauty or accomplishments, yet she could hold her own with women who had both.

Comforts for the Sickroom. An experienced trained nurse declares that a double bed is a necessity in making an invalid comfortable. It allows of changed positions and in many ways is an improvement on the single bed. In preparing a bed for an invalid always have two sets of bedclothing, so that one set can be aired while the other is in use. Woolen blankets should be provided in place of down or cotton covers. Pillows of various sizes are an absolute necessity. It is much better to have the pillows filled with soft hair than with feathers. Soft springs are another necessary requirement to the invalid's comfort as well as a hair mattress.

Gold Mouchoir Bags. Pocketless skirts have given a long life to the gold chain purse and the mouchoir bag, and so far no hint of their being put aside is abroad. Some of the gold mouchoir bags are small enough to be held on the finger by a ring and almost hidden in the palm of the hand, yet they do hold a mouchoir, a key or two—very small ones, of course—and a jointed loggion.

Simple Remedy for a St. It is claimed, according to the New York Tribune, that the following recipe will cure a sty: Make a curd by mixing a small pinch of powdered alum with the white of an egg. Place between two pieces of soft lawn and bind over the eye before going to bed. The application may have to be repeated, but the treatment is sure to be successful.
