CLERKS' HOURS IN GERMANY

An Effort to Do Away With the Long Midday Interval. a uscussion is going on in commer-cial circles in Germany regarding the respective merits of the English and German systems of arranging the A discussion is going on in commerhours of work in banks, company offices and big business houses.

It has always been customary in Germany for clerks and accountants and all workers of this class to begin work considerably earlier than is the case in England and to terminate work in the evening much later than is usual in London. Work begins in German offices, as a rule, at 8 o'clock in the morning and is frequently not concluded before 8 o'clock in the evening, Partial compensation for the early beginning and late termination is obtained by taking a two hours' pause at midday, but even with this break the total hours worked in German offices considerably exceed those in English offices, especially as a half holiday Sat-urday is still an exceptional arrangement in Germany.

An agitation is now going on for the abolition of the long midday interval and of the introduction of the hours of work usual in English offices. Many German business men, however, resist the innovation and persist in maintaining the old fashioned system.

Many German stockbrokers, company directors, directors of banks and captains of industry adopt a curious arrangement by which they dine at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and afterward return to their offices from 6 till 8 o'clock in the evening.

Those Germans who have practical experience of office work in England are unanimous in declaring that Eng-fish clerks do just as much in six or seven hours as German clerks in nine or ten hours and advance this as a strong argument in favor of the general adoption of the English hours of work in offices. A few of the big banks in Berlin have already got as far as a working day of eight hours, from 9 o'clock in the morning till 5 o'clock in the afteroon, with two hours less Saturday, Letter in London Standard.

Mr. Darwin had shown that bumble Mr. Darwin had shown that bumble-bees were the only insects fond of clover nectar which possessed a pro-boscis sufficiently long to reach the bottom of the long, tube-like flowers and at the same time a body heavy enough to bend down the clover head so that the pollen would fall on the insect's book and thus he carried off insect's back and thus be carried off to fertilize other flowers of the same species. The bumblebees sent to Australia cost the farmers there about half a dollar apiece, but they proved to be worth the price.

AN ANGEL ELEPHANT

By GRETCHEN GRAYDON

"I wonder if you dream how adorable you are in that blue gown," Hetherton said, trying to possess himself of Philomena's band.

She drew it away, pursed her lips daintily, and flung back at him, "Oh! It's the gown, is it? Thank you for telling me. I shall be sure to wear it the next time the MacCarty comes to see us.'

"Confound the MacCarty!" Hetherton ejaculated. "I'd like to break his head for him, the presumptuous oaf. What business has he even to admire vou? "Mayn't a cat look at a king?" Philomena interrupted demurely, her eyes dancing in the screen of their long lashes.

She had the charm of infinite variety. Some days she was positively ugly, others ravishingly beautiful. This was one of the beautiful days. She knew it, and acted upon the knowledge. She owed Hetherton for several things, chiefly Miss Mannering. He should be paid in full. He had never proposed to her outright, but all along assumed gayly that she would marry him, speaking openly, in a light comedy manner that might mean everything or nothing. She had not ented the light comedy manner, be ing by no means sure of her own mind, Still it had been distinctly aggravat ing to have him run off after the Mannering girl the same as the other men. For two whole days he had kept in the new beauty's train; worse still, he had come back to Philomena not merely repentant, but with the air of one who feels that he has discharged the duty of a proper man.

"A cat may look at a king; the proverb is silent as to queens," Hetherton retorted. "Moreover, you can scarcely stretch it to fit an elephant, which is the MacCarty's animal prototype." "Now I know how I came to promise him two dances—I adore elephants—always did," Philomena murmured, reflectively, as if aside. Hetherton caught both her hands and drew her to her feet. "Do you mean to keep the promise?" he asked, his face darkening. She smiled up at him au-daciously as she answered: 'Who knows? He may prefer to sit them out. But if he should, you needn't mind, we will take care to keep out of earshot of you and Miss Mannering"-

"Oh! I see," Hetherton laughed, not quite easily, but with a magical lightening of countenance. "I must say will be handsome of you," went on; then, his hands slipping up to her shoulders. "Sweetheart, let's run away from everything-the grand ball, the elephant, the Mannering-run away and get married. Listen! It will be so easy; only a spin across country to that dear little stone church we saw last week-we'll take along witnesses -and telegraph for our traps to follow us. 'If 'twere done, when 'twere don then 'twere well 'twere done quickly.' Think how much we shall escape, all the fuss and frills and upsetments of a big wedding. And this is the only way to escape them. I know your aunt has her heart set on St. Thomas', with twelve bridesmaids, and all the rest of it. Say yes, there's a darling. I will live just to keep you from being sorry for it, even one time." "It sounds enticing," Philomena said, then with a reflective sigh: "But it can't be done. You see if I ran off with you, the Mannering would inevitably get the MacCarty and his millions That's what she is here for, and that's what I'm bound not to let her do."

Philomena opened her eyes very wide. "Why, he told me so," she said. "You know we are great friends and talk of many things. And he is really vastly entertaining—such a big bulk of vastly entertaining—such a big bulk of raw human nature, with streaks of wit and other streaks of understand-ing through its honest ignorance." "H-m! You are somewhat a belle. How many times has he proposed to you?" Hetherton asked.

you?" Hetherton asked.
"Only once, the first day," Philomena said, smiling wickedly. "I asked time for consideration, but he wouldn't give it. He wanted a straight yes or no, but consoled me by telling me that if after awhile he was not engaged he would give me another chance. So I would give me another chance. So I must be sure and make up my mind. I know he is not engaged, not unless Miss Mannering has landed him since morning."

Hetherton tore it open, glanced at its contents, then stood twisting it between his fingers and smiling an odd, dazed smile. After a long breath he took Philomena in his arms and kissed her, saying in her ear;

"Luck has stood your friend. I'm a beggar, or shall be in two hours more. That was a call for margins I can no more put up than I can fly. I've been speculating wildly. I wanted you so badly I thought I must offer you milno less than myself. Until today they seemed in my grasp. That was why I dared. But I'm losing every-thing at once."

"Seems like it's time I took a hand in this game," a throaty voice said behind them, and there stood the Mac-Carty, very red, and all over perspira-tion. He had been ambushed all the while in the summer house outside which the lovers stood. "You folks think list'nin' ain't the right thing," he went on. "No more it ain't, but I waked from a nap as you were in the midst o' talkin', and it didn't take ten words to show me the lay o' the land.

I like the lay of it. The little lady nodding toward Philomena, "has got me doped out fine and pat, but she didn't make sport of the old galoot. She said it in sport, but she has looked out fer me. And more'n that, she's made me understand thar was at least one woman money couldn't buy. You ain't half good enough fer her," this to Hetherton with chuckle. "But since it appears she likes the looks o' ye, be you're a-goin' to take her and try love in a cottage. At least, not onless cottage's got all the fixin's. No need to tell me how you stand. Women of Ancient Rome.

"We are assured by Seneca," says the historian Inge, "that there were women in ancient Rome who counted their ages not by their years, but by the husbands they had had. Juvenal tells of one woman who had married eight husbands in five years. Divorce was granted on the slightest pretext. Many bled, trying to draw her to his breast.

She put him away with gentledgnity, saying: "But it is not a joke.

Marriage for the Ro-man woman meant a transition from rigid seclusion to almost unbounded liberty. She appeared as a matter of course at her husband's table whether, he had company or not. When Count Tolstoi was a young man he took part in a bear hunt that nearly ended fatally. When the beast charged him Tolstoi fired and missed. He fired a second shot, which hit the bear's jaw and lodged between his teeth. Tolstol was knocked down, falling with his face in the snow.
"There," he thought, "all is over with "Is your mind made up?" Hetherton asked teasingly.

Philomena shook her head, but said brightly: "Not yet. Still, there's no telling what may happen between dances."

"Then you refuse—my plan and everything?" Hetherton said, paling visibly.

Philomena shot a glance at him and shivered faintly, but said, with an accent of gentle surprise, "Why, I did that some time ago."

"You will fight the Mannering woman for the MacCarty. You would not "There," he thought, "all is over with me."
