Whence comes that smile serene? O, I am now thrice happy-I've found it—CARBOLINE.

' It's just what I've been looking for, Since I've been seventeen—
And getting balder every day
Till I got CARBOLINE.

' It's growing in right rapidly, My head can now be seen Like other heads, in silken locks, Thanks to my CARBOLINE.

'I know a pretty, black-eyed maid A royal little queen, Who'll be as much rejoiced as I To see this CARBOLINE.

False curls, and borrowed sheen, And shake upon her shoulders plump The wealth of CARBOLINE. And when our heads are covered o'er

She'll throw away her switches,

As once they were, I ween, We'll noise abroad the praises Of wondrous CARBOLINE.

Mr. RICHARDSON could only join in the sense of the country. He believed that even judges and ministers should be assessed. The poor man with a few hundred dollars a year and a half acre of ground had to pay taxes, and it was a piece of class legislation to exempt rich ministers and judges. It was the duty of the House to give effect to public opinion, and not to carry out their own views, and this consideration should have particular weight in regard to the reduction of the puny attempts of the Provincial Secretary to injure the leader of the Opposition, and pointed out that though the Secretary thought himself a Goliah the hon. member for London had groved himself a Pavid, and, like David, he had discomfitted the would be giant. (Applause.) He advotated the leasening of the cost of the holding of municipal elections, and favoured a reduction in the membership of the House.

Mr. CURRIE said he did not wish to prolong the debate; but he desired to congratulate the hon. member for London on his election to the leadership of the Opposition, which he did. He looked upon the amendments at the committing and the committing and salaries of ministers. The Opposition having taken the increase for several sessions, their move would not do them much good in the country, because it was made at the last session and when the prevent of the membership of the Opposition, which he did. He looked upon the amendments are to the province should be conducted with the committen and the province should be conducted with the consultation, and the result of his taking the matter into his consideration, and the result of his taking the matter into his consideration, and the result of his taking the matter into his consideration, and the result of his taking the matter into his consideration, and the result of his taking the matter into his consideration, and the result of his taking the matter into his consideration, and the result of his taking the matter into his consideration, and the result of his taking the matter into his consideration, and the result of his takin and, like David, he had discomfitted the would be giant. (Applause.) He advocated the lessening of the cost of the holding of municipal elections, and favoured a reduction in the membership of the House.

Mr. CURRIE said he did not wish to prolong the debate; but he desired to congratulate the hon. member for London on his election to the leadership of the Opposition, which he did. He looked upon the amendment of the hon. member for South Simose as a want of confidence motion, and declared that the proper time to reduce declared that the proper time to reduce the indemnity was when the estimates were under consideration. He alleged that it was the policy of the Opposition to spend the surplus and to reduce the representation of the people by one half.

Mr. MEREDITH—That was the hon.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN said the essence of he debate was that portion of it relating to he amendment. While he had not signed he round-robin, he was willing to take his The history of the question showed to what extreme lengths party strife was carried. Mr. HUNTER said that if it had taken the House eight days to discuss three clauses of the Address, any school boy could calculate how long it was going to discuss the entire Address. He attributed the lightness of the depression as felt in Ontario to the money expended by the Government on public works, and expressed the adoption of a course by the Legislature by which the improvement of Canadian stock would be effected, and the necessity for buying the better class or stock at Chicago avoided. He was pleased to hear expressions in favour of changes in the jury laws, and hoped that any proposed amendments would be referred to a committee of competent men. Regarding the indemnity he disclaimed any responsibility for articles on the subject in the London Herald, and pointed out that the member for East Eigin (Mr. Wilson) had last session voted for the decrease which he now objected to. On the part of the Opposition there had been no breach of faith in introducing the motion under consideration, for after the proposition to reduce was made last session—after notification that such a motion would be into the salaries of Ministers, believing after notification that such a motion would come from the Opposition—the matter was thrown open for the members of the House to deal with as they thought proper. (Hear, hear.) He pointed out that the Decirical Covernment patronage of made to set as Reform converges of the House to deal with as they thought proper. Mr. RICHARDSON could only join in the congratulations of the Address in so far as they referred to the arrival of the Marquis of Lorne and his wife. He country of Middlesex had been handed over by the Government to Mr. David Glass, who, having been elected to the House of Commons as a Contraction of the sense of the country. He believed that servative, afterwards became a Reformer. He (Mr. Tooley) did not expect to have even judges and ministers should be assessed. The poor man with a few hundred any of the patronage, but he had presented namely: that the expenditure should be kept within the revenue. The proposition was evidently a correct one, and hon. gentlemen had been compelled to vote want of confidence in themselves and to take to his Honour a declaration to the same effect as that which the Opposition desired to impress upon them. (Applause.)

The House adjourned at 12.45.

If there is anything which can strengthen a public man in the discharge of his duties, it is to know that his fellow citizens regard him with feelings of such cordiality. I have not been long in public life, and hitherto have had pretty smooth sailing, but now having attained a more prominent position than I anticipated, I find that I am indeed amongst the breakers of political life. (Laughter.) I had thought hitherto that I had a pretty fair reputation, but at the very outset I am beginning to think that even this is to be east away. (Laughter.) When I read in the leading organ of the Reform party to-day an attack on me and on leading members in the Local House, it made me feel that it was not a very desirable thing to be a leader. But when I see the faces around me to-night it strengthens me and makes me feel that I still retain the confidence of my fellow citizens. (Loud cheers.) cheers.) The particular matter out of that may not be uninteresting to refer to on this occasion. In the first year of the present Parliament, by unanimous consent of both sides of the House, the indemnity of each member was increased from $600 to $800. Now, the responsibility attaching to that rests as well with the Government as with the Opposition, and net the least capital can be made out of what took place on that occasion. Differences of opinion may exit as to the propriety of that act, but for my part, I am prepared to accept my portate that the Opposition, and I have never at any time, I trust, attempted to shift the outs, and place the responsibility on the Government. There never was a most of that increase, are trying to available that a considerable portion of the pessition in the Government. There never was a monitounded attack than that. The position have I, nor, I believe, a single member of the public and reduce the indemnity, (Cheers.) Now, as I said, on no occasion have I, nor, I believe, a single member of the Opposition side of the House, desired to that its the responsibility of the public and reduce the indemnity, (Cheers.) Now, as I said, on no occasion have I, nor, I believe, a single member of the opposition side of the House, desired to shirt the responsibility of that action, but we oppose it as true representatives of the people, whose wishes we are bound to carry out or retire. The position that the Opposition may say. Then you will understand the position my say. Then you will understand the position my say. Then you will understand the position my say. Then you will understand the position we took with regard to the responsibility of what action, but well and the proposition that the opposition take is this, that a large portion of the people, whose wishes of the Prosposition that the Poposition may say. the press of the Opposition may say. Then you will understand the position we took with regard to the responsibility of what has been done, and we only say that it is now the duty of the House to retrace the steps they have taken. In the Address which has been presented to me you have been kind enough to refer to the prospect in the election which we are about to enter, and to hope that the Conservatives may be victorious. I am not going to prophesy, but looking at the result of the late election, and the fact that the Parliament of Ontario ought to be dissolved on the 2nd of February, and that the members of the Government are trying to keep it over longer, it is plain to me that they do not feel prepared to meet the people. (Loud cheers.) I venture to think that when the people of this Province come to pass an epinion on their acts, it will not be a renewal of confidence in the present Govern-ment, but that at the next election they will have to give place to a Liberal-Conserwill have to give place to a Liberal-Conservative Government. (Great cheering). The people of this country from one end to the other pronounced against the administration of the late Dominion Government on the 17th of September last, and I do not think that the Ontario Government is in a bit better position. The people have pronounced in favour of the national policy, the Conservative Government have added to their numbers a large portion of the people.

their power to prevent that evil. As a Canadian, I am desirous that in this country we may promote a national feeling and a national sentiment, and it is because I think that the Conservative party are more likely to promote that feeling and that end, that I am to-day so firm a supporter of that party. (Cheers.) In addition to this question of indemnity, there is also the question of finance. The Administration of Mr. Mowat, while they have been in power seven years, have largely increased the expenditure. From $1,800,000 it has increased over 60 per cent., and throughout the length and breadth of this Province they are beginning to consider that if things go on as they have, and if something is not done to bring the expenditure within the revenue, they will have to bring on direct taxation. It is the object, however, of the Opposition to curtail this expenditure, and keep it within the revenue, and in that policy I feel confident that we have the support of a large majority of the people of this Province. (Cheers.) Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, there are other members of the Ontario Legislature here to-night who I am sure you will be pleased to hear. You have had many opportunities of hearing me, and, therefore, I will not detain you longer. I regret very much that my esteemed friend Mr. Soott, of Peterboro, is unable to be here to-night, for I am sure he would have been heartily received. I would say in conclusion, that I thank you most heartily for the kind reception you have given me, and I trust that in my public career I may not cause you to withdraw the support you have as kindly given me in the past. (Prolonged cheering.)

Without a Rival.

Mr. H. R. Stevens, Boston, Mass.

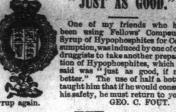

Dear Sir—Your Vegetine stands without a rival in this country. As an Alterative it has go equal. I consider it a valuable remedy for Rheumatic Complaints especially. My stock of drugs would be incomplete without it.

Very respectfully yours,

C. K. PARKS

Druggist.
