their own. The people of Canada do not care what McMullen's antecedents may be. It is sufficient that they know him to be the trusted friend and associate of Sir Hugh Allan, on whom the latter relied to assist him in procuring money to forward his designs. The two friends quarrel and Mr. McMullen reveals the plot, expessing to the gaze of the public the corruption of their rulers in all its hideousness. What the people want is a full and searching investigation, and all the dirt that ministerial hacks may throw at McMullen will not satisfy them that the skirts of the government are clean. The pelicy which is being pursued on behalf of the accused being pursued on behalf of the accused is simply the outpouring of rage by a gang of robbers against one of their number who has turned Queen's evidence and exposed their nefarious designs.

Searing of the Public Conscience. Montreal, like New York, is a com-

smaller amount of wrong-doing woke the ire of the community then than is necessary to anger us now. Then the division of some £10,000 of profits on municipal funds between the Mayor of Toronto and the Premier of the country, which funds obtained their value through special legislation, was followed by legal action in Toronto by which Mr. Bowes was made to discorge his share and by a list or esign his seat for South Sir made to disgorge his share, and by a political rising in Montreal by which Mr. Hincks was forced to lay down his power and leave for distant parts. Mr. Hincks' publicly announced maxim at that time was that there was nothing wrong in a Premier profiting by changes brought about by legislation, and on this saying he was condemned. It seems however, that time works unhappy changes. Canada has since Mr. Hincks' departure been governed so nearly on the principles which hefathered, although his successors have not been governed by his master passion, that on his return, the country practically agas to
