CHAPTER VII.

I Never Heard of Her!

"Am very late, am I not?" she said.
"No, no," he replied; "I did not hope to see you for another hour. I knew you would be tired. I hope there was no noise!" and his brows knit anxiously. "I gave strict orders that the house should be kept quiet. No, you are particularly early considering that Harold had not put an appearance. He has gone down the river for a swim. How have you slept, Lilian, dear?"
"Very well—too well," she replied, dancing at the clock with a smile.
"Never mind the time," he said.
"Remember, you are mistaken here, and you can order things your like."
She lowered her down-white lids,
"Shall I give you some coffee?"
The old man nodded an assent and watched her, watched her face, and her hands as they moved about the fragile Nankin cups, with an eager, admiring glance.

Riding For a Fall.

Judging from the majority on the first division on the King's Accession Declaration Bill, and particularly from the substantial assent of Mr. Bal-four, Premier Asquith will have little trouble with the bill. At one time all office holders, except the King, were subjected to this form of test. Nowadays, however, the King is the only office holder subject to this form of test.

It looks as if the Asquith Government will meet with more opposition on account of the Budget than from the King's Declaration Bill. The Nationalist party dislike parts of the Budget as heartily as the Unionists dislike other parts, and there appears to be as little doubt that this dislike is widely prevalent in Ireland, and that the O'Brien party are trading on it to the disadvantage of the Redmondites. It would be the irony of fate should the Budget bring down the Liberal party after all the agitation against the Lords for referring it to the people. And that may happen. But then, what about the Veto Bill, whose passage Redmond regards as a first step to Home Rule. The situation creates a dilemma for Redmond, and maybe that is the meaning of Lloyd George's present proposal. The future outlook may be so dark and difficult that Lloyd George is riding for a fall.

Temperance Sermons Yesterday.

Rev. J. W. Aikens, Temperance Lecturer of the Methodist Church, who is here from Canada preached three times yesterday. In the morning he addressed the people at George Street Church on the text: "His Kingdom Shall Increase." He spoke in the College Hall in the afternoon, and at Cochrane Street Church at night. There were large attendances on the three occasions and deep interest was taken in each discourse.

In the service at George Street Church the rev. preacher began by saying that he did not believe with some pessimists that crime was on the increase. The Divine plan of the world was surely getting better. It was man's duty to co-operate in this plan and help to establish more virtue and more sobriety into the world. The light of publicity should be brought to bear on the rum seller. The laws should be invoked against him. Saloons were now being closed at the rate of 40 a day. In 1908 there were 700 breweries and 40 saloons put out of business. The plan of the Almighty was being worked out. Another hopeful sign of the times was the lashed of late years was of a higher moral. The Church realized the value of the boys and tried to remove the pitfalls of bad literature and the saloons.

In the College Hall Rev. Mr. Fenwick presided. There were also present Revs. J. Thackeray, C. Hackett, W. T. D. Dunn, J. K. Curtis and F. R. Matthews. Rev. Mr. Thackeray offered prayer after the opening hymn had been sung. Rev. Mr. Aikens then arose and spoke for half an hour on the Temperance Question and gave the following reasons why the bar-rooms should be closed:—

- (1) Because it is an enemy to the cross of Christ, where all moral reform begins;
- (2) Because no body of men have any right to license that on which God has pronounced condemnation;
- (3) Because the license system as a means of regulating the liquor traffic is a failure;
- (4) Because a bar room is a blight upon the prosperity of any city;
- (5) Because it decreases legitimate business;
- (6) Because it depreciates the value of property, nobody desiring to live near or do business next to it;
- (7) Because it is a menace to every manufacturing establishment.

A very large congregation heard Mr. Aikens' speak in Cochrane St. Church in the night from the problem of the "Good Samaritan." Many was the victim of environment. Temperance reformers should work along the lines that recognize this parable and strike at the saloon. The "certain man" in the parable was helpless and dependent. The good Samaritan set an example that temperance workers should follow. He took the part that the Church is now taking. He was brave, and feared no human respect. He boldly went to his rescue and bandaging up his wounds brought him to his own hotel and ministered unto him. The temperance workers should follow the example of the good Samaritan.

A Suggestion.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—In the interests of our Annual Derby Day, and especially from a financial standpoint, would it not be a good idea for the Hon. John Harvey and his associates to add to the Regatta Committee a representative from each of our city Unions. To my mind it would certainly cause more interest in our Derby Day as the various Unions would then take a more active interest in it; and again from a financial standpoint it would add considerably to the funds, as each Union, by subscribing a small amount from each member, could present a handsome donation to the committee. For instance, if say only 5 cents each were given by the members of the L. S. P. U., it would amount to something in the vicinity of $75.00. The same thing applies to the other Unions, as no doubt each of them would be glad to subscribe something. I therefore hope that at the next meeting of the committee the suggestion will be acted upon; and thanking you for space,
I am, yours truly,
CITIZEN.
