RUSSIAN REPORT.

To the Governor, Newfoundland:
LONDON, Nov. 27.
Following from Press Bureau:-
The Russian General Staff reports advantages secured for Russia's troops in the Lodz battle. The Germans, trying to facilitate the retreat of their various camps, are now falling back in the Strykow region, under very unfavorable conditions. On Nov. 25th, 8,000 prisoners were captured.
HARCOURT.

OVER-SUBSCRIBED.

LONDON, Nov. 27.
The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lloyd George, announced in the Commons to-day that the war loan has been greatly over-subscribed.

THE NAVY UNCONQUERABLE.

LONDON, Nov. 27.
Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in a speech in the Commons this evening before the adjournment of the Lower House, told the country that despite the loss of some older ships of the British Navy, there was no cause for nervousness, but every reason for complete confidence in the power of the Navy. The First Lord told of the danger to British ships from mines and submarines and the possibility of armoured fast enemy liners escaping on the high seas and becoming a prey on the Allies shipping, which, he added, had been prevented thus far. He concluded his speech with the statement that there was another danger, "that of an overseas invasion enterprise, which was full of danger for those who might attempt it." Churchill said that considering the work the Navy had done in the protection of British commerce and the restrictions it had placed on the enemy's supplies, and the conveying by it of great numbers of troops to and fro across the world, he was bound to say, "I think we have had our share of luck." On the whole, the First Lord said, he considered the Navy had done well. It was, he declared, driving German commerce from the seas and preventing the enemy from getting war material which they needed more and more as the war proceeded. Even if England were single-handed, there would be no reason to despair, but with the French in control of the Mediterranean, the Japs in the Pacific, and the Russian navy developing, we could go on indefinitely receiving our supplies from wherever we need them, and transporting our troops wherever they are required and continue the process with our strength growing greater every month, until the end of, perhaps, a not very distant date, when we achieve the purpose for which we are fighting. The British submarines could not score, as the German ships did not come to fight, but he added that the British torpedo boat destroyers had proved their superiority in gun power, a fact that was unknown before the war. As for building, the First Lord said that England would add fifteen capital ships to her fleet before the end of 1915, to Germany's three. In fact England could lose one Super-Dreadnought monthly for a year and still maintain her superiority over Germany's ships. Light cruisers, he continued, were being rapidly added to the British fleet, and England had commissioned since the commencement of the war more than Germany had destroyed or interned. This number, including the Breslau, he said, amount to six. The loss to British merchant ships, the First Lord said, was a loss that had been anticipated by the Admiralty. Nevertheless England had been able, by virtue of its sea-power, to draw from all over the world for the cause of the Allies, everything that was needed, including an abundance in a supply of ammunition, while deficiencies in these commodities are beginning clearly to show in the enemy's military organization.

BODIES RECOVERED.

SHEERNESS, Eng., Nov. 27.
Thirty bodies from the English battleship Bulwark, were recovered from the River Thames to-day. Most of the bodies so far recovered are mutilated almost beyond identification. Many pathetic scenes were witnessed as relatives gathered in an effort to obtain information concerning them. Up to the present time, however, the authorities have not given out a list of the lost.

WILSON'S PROTEST.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.
President Wilson has communicated, unofficially, to the diplomatic representatives of the United States, in the belligerent countries of Europe, his disapproval of attacks by bombs from air-craft, dropped on unfortified cities, occupied by non-combatants.

COLLIER BLOWN UP.

LONDON, Nov. 27.
The Admiralty announced this evening that the collier Kharatoum was blown up to-day by a mine off Grimsby. The crew were saved and landed at Grimsby.

NOTHING TO REPORT.

PARIS, Nov. 27.-(Official).
To-day has been calm. There is nothing to report.

THE ALLIED NAVIES.

BORDEAUX, Nov. 27.
An official Navy bulletin issued this evening says: In the Mediterranean the French and British squadrons continue their blockade in the Adriatic sea, and the Dardanelles to protect the coasts of Egypt and the Suez Canal. In the North Sea, British and French ships have made reconnaissance of the German batteries established on the Belgian Coast. The German cruisers in the Pacific do not seem to have left the Chilean waters since the fight of Nov. 1st.

PARLIAMENT ADJOURNS.

LONDON, Nov. 27.
The Commons this evening adjourned till February 2nd, and the Lords till January 6th.

BRITAIN'S TRADE.

LONDON, Nov. 27.
Dealing with steps taken by the Government to assist commerce during the war, Mr. Lloyd George said that the Government had undertaken responsibilities which no Government ever had called upon to assume before. "We had not merely our own business to run," the Chancellor continued, "but we were an essential part of a machine that ran the international trade of the world. We carried half the produce, and provided the capital that moved this produce from one part of the world to another, not merely for ourselves, but for other countries. Giving instances, he referred to the Cotton trade, and said that all the movements from the plantations to the ultimate destination of cotton, were represented by paper, signed either at London, Manchester or Liverpool. When the United States bought cotton or silk or tea in China, payment was made through London, by means of these documents. That showed, he said, how complicated the system was. The paper issued in London had become a part of the currency of the world. Into this fine delicate paper machinery crashed a great war, affecting two-thirds of the people of the world, and confusion was inevitable. It was as if a violent kick had been given to an ant heap, and for a moment there were confusion and panic. The deadlock, which existed, the Chancellor pointed out, was not due to any lack of credit in this country. It was due to failure of remittances from abroad. He told his hearers that the action which the British Government had taken was to save British trade, British commerce, British labor and British lives. The Government, he said, had hypothesized the credit of the State in order to restore the exchanges upon which the commerce and industry of the country depended, and upon which the whole community depended for their daily life.

Finest Troops In the World.

"Our artillery are great. They are grand. Their performances have made my blood thrill and have made me feel proud that I am an Englishman. Gunners and Drivers were as cool as cucumbers under fire, and what execution they wrought. Some day I hope to be able to tell you all about it-how they stood out as great soldiers, heroes every one. Good God, what a sight, and what a great day for them!"

"From what I have actually seen in the war, there is no doubting the fact that the British trained troops are the finest in the world. Give us more of them. We are bound to win."-Sergeant A. J. Spicket, 9th Lancers to Mr. Frank Goode, Glamorgan Farm School.
