Ottawa, June 20.—The remainder of the Maritime Provinces delegates to the Liberal convention arrived this morning, making a total attendance of 218, including the Premiers of the three Provinces. Every Liberai M. P. or defeated candidate of the Maritime Provinces is here except Dr. Colter, of Carleton, W. B., who is ill. The Maritime men are very enthusiastic. About 300 Ontario delegates arrived this morning and 100 or more from Quebec at moon. There are also considerable delegations in from points in the Ottawa Valley, and with eity men there were close on 700 delegates present to open the convention. Mr. Laurier spent the morning quietly at the Mussell fraternizing with the The convention then adjourned.

Laurier and Cartwright.

The evening session was devoted chiefly to addresses by Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Richard Cartwright. The rink was crowded to its utmost capacity, many being obliged to stand throughout the proceedings. The enthusiasm seems to be intensifying with every passing more appropriate that the second of the constitution of the control of the cont tensifying with every passing moment, and was manifested to-night by the spontaneous outburst of cheers and applause that punctuated the speeches and that accentuated the points made by the speakers in nearly every sentence. Never has Mr. Laurier been in better form, and never has he spoken with greater keenness of argument or more graceful elequence. He first took up the question of of the committee in securing the rink for the great gathering was amply proven, for ne other building in the city of Ottawa would have begun to hold the vast multi-under that assembled in this commedious structure. The building itself, unattractive in its bare state, was made very presentable, if not actually pretty, by the flags and bunting and other decorations that hung from the rafters and walls and posts, while immerous motions setting forth the leading principles of the Reform party loomed out from every convenient point. A platform capable of seating over 100 persons had been erected, and this was surrounded by a mass of ferns and presented a very attractive

tion of
THE CONDITION OF THE COUNTRY.
The ills of Canada, he maintained, were not of constitutional character, but such as could be easily cured by the application of the proper remedies and thus issues. The question of the future of the country was one of great interest, and one that must be dealt with at some future time, but these were not practical issues. Now they must clear away all incumbrances and getright down into the heart the card brances and get right down into the heart of the question, and THE GREAT ISSUE before the country he deemed was the tariff question. The speaker then placed the line of demarcation between the two parties on this question very clear and distinct. He declared the National Policy to be a fraud and a failure and that it must be wiped out offexistence. The Government had declared their intention to maintain the principle of the N. P., and on that he took direct issue with them. The protective tariff was erroneous in principle and disastrous in practice—it was a fraud and a robbery and must be destroyed root and branch. The cheers that greeted this clear enunciation of his political faith showed how heartly his audience was with him on this question. The ideal system, appearance. In the center of the drapery and over the stage was a portrait of her Majesty the Queen, while opposite the stage, enwreathed in a Union Jack, are the words, "Laurier, Our Leader." The crimetra gallery is lung with bunting, in the center of which is a scroll bearing the names of the honored dead of the party—Papineau, Baldwin, Lafohtaine, Dorion, Brown, Mackenzie. AN IMMENSE GATHERING.

There was seating capacity for over 2,500 people in the rink, exclusive of the galleries, which were reserved for the ladies, who were present in large numbers. Every seat in the building was occupied, and the quality of the delegates is as good as the quantity. All classes are represented—farmers, laboring him on this question. The ideal system, he stated, was the British system of classes are represented—farmers, laboring men, merchants, manufacturers, lumber and all kinds of professional men, and a more intelligent lot of men never assembled to any city in America for any purpose. It was about 3 o'clock when Hon. Wilfrid Laurier entered and took his seat mpon the platform, and his appearance was greeted with hearty cheers, which were relocated again and again as Cartwright and Miowat and other leaders made their appearance. As soon as order was restored Mr. Laurier rose and stepped to the front, and then that was a faddence rose to their feet and sent forth such a cheer as was This is the finality toward which

This is the finality toward which they must aim, though some duties would have to be levied for a time for revenue purposes, but they must be imposed chiefly on the luxuries of the people. On this issue of a tariff for revenue only they proposed to fight the next contest, and did overy man of that convention do his duty the result could not be doubted. He next dealt briefly with the question of RECIPROCITY, declaring that such a measure of free trade with the States as could honorably and equitably be obtained should be sought for, and he believed could be obtained. The question of locality he dealt with in a most effective manner. The interest of the colony was not the interest of the empire, and where diversity of interests arose each member must seek its own advantage. Their ancestors left the old land and came here to better their condition, and surely now they should not let their prosperity be sacrificed for the financial advantage of the mother land. Englishmen look to the advantage of England, and Canadians must look after the interest of Canada. It any man in Canada says he prefers the interest of England before that of Canada let him go to England and live there. He next turned his attention to NEVER BEFORE HEARD IN OTTAWA— a cheer that must have struck terror into the hearts of the Tory Ministers on Parliathe hearts of the Tory Ministers on Parliament Hill, where it might have been distinctly heard. It was the shout of a vast amy of warriors entering into the fray—a shout of triumph for the victory now assured. For several minutes the mighty clamor continued, and then the Liberal loader, in a few choice terms, nominated as chairman of the convention Sir Oliver Mowat. The promission was confirmed. Slowat. The nomination was confirmed by an "Aye!" that shook the windows, and as advanced to the front he received an ovation scarcely less enthusiastic than that accorded to Mr. Laurier. The veteran Premier modestly thanked the convention for the honor conferred upon him, and then gave a carefully prepared address, full of sound advice and admonition. He paid a glowing eulogium to Hon. Wilfrid

The Newspaper Men.

The newspaper men attending the convention met informally last evening and listened to speeches by several of their number, and then by the Liberal leader. Mr. John Cameron, of the London Advertiser, was chairman, and there were about 40 present. Two-minute speeches were made by the chairman; Mr. McCready, Telegraph, St. John; P. O'Brien, Globe, St. John; J. T. Hawke, Transcript, Moncton; A. McNee, Windsor Record, and Mr. Armstrong, St. Andrew's Beacon. When Mr. Laurier entered the room the newspaper men rose to their feet and cheered him again and again, sang that he was a joily good fellow and cheered him once more. Mr. Laurier, in the few remarks which he addressed to his enthusiastic audience, acknowledged the usefulness of the press, saying that he knew that it was notowing to the lack of ability nor devotion on the part of the Liberal press that the party had not been successful; but they had had to fight against other methods than those of argument. If there was one thing more than another, he told them, on which he relied for victory at the approaching election it was the Liberal press and the influence of organized distribution of Liberal literature. They had no other inducement to offer. He could only ask them to put forward a special effort this time, to put forth a special effort from this day, every day, until the next elections are fought out and won. (Cheers.) There was more cheering, and Mr. Laurier left to go to the rink to the evening meeting.

Cossip of the Day.

At last night's meeting, Mr. C. S. Hyman, M. P. for London, read a letter from the mayor of Ottawa congratulating the delegrates upon the magnificent encess of the convention, and declaring that, though all the public of that city might not be in ascord politically with them, there could be no doubt that the object of the convention was the good of the country.
