BOY FALLS DOWN DISUSED SHAFT

Perils in Exploring an Abandoned English Mine.

Two schoolboys went exploring the other day, and the expedition proved disastrous to one of them. The boys, Albert Jones and Allan Thomas, went for a stroll on the Great Ome, and near the lighthouse they discovered a disused shaft of the old copper mines. They decided to explore it, and proceeded along the level, in single file, Jones leading. They had not gone far when they came to a dark passage, and many yards in the darkness before them was started by hearing his friend call for help. He hurried to the lighthouse, and found the boy lying on the ground. He tried to lift him, but the boy was too heavy, and he was unable to do so. He then called for help, and a man came to the shaft. The boy was taken to the hospital, but he died before he could be removed.

A disastrous fire broke out at Portmouth recently at the great building of Messrs. Ganser and Nichol. The whole building was quickly alight, and in a few minutes the flames were out of control. The fire spread to the petrol store, and the building was completely destroyed. The loss was estimated at £100,000.

The Amazing Experience of an English Family.

The father, who had been working away from home and had not heard about his supposed death, was at a loss to understand the silence and amazement of the son and daughter when he unexpectedly returned to Mithley.
