DUBLIN, Oct. 25.—The new Irish recommendations of the Geddes and constitution passed its third and final cher economic committees during reading in the Dail Eireann today. Deputy John Milroy described the ocument as the greatest triumph for Ireland since the battle of Kinsale. "It was a monument," he said, "to the two great men who had passed away-(Michael Collins and Arthur labor. Griffith)-whose names would be blessed by future generations of Irishmen. Mr. Milroy said he did not wish to suggest that the British Parliament would jeopardize a bill won with so much labor, but that the Dail must look beyond the bill to their fellow-countrymen in Northeastern Ireland as the next great step that would have to be considered. He hoped the Anglo-Irish treaty and the constitution would bring the northeasterners to realize that their nterests were those of Tipperary himself on the imperative need for a "To those people a message of good problems.
