LAST YEARS AND DEATH OF ARCH-BISHOP USSHER. (From The Guardian.)

The Primate appears at this time to have been imressed with the idea of his approaching dissolution. In his almanac he noted every year, opposite his birthday, his age, and in January 1655-6, he wrote, "Nov aged seventy-five years, my years are full," and a little below he wrote in large letters, "Resignation" About the middle of February he left London for Regate, taking his last leave of his friends and relations. On his arrival there he resumed his task of finishing his "Chronologia Sacra" with as much diligence as the weakness of his eyes permitted; but their failure impeded his progress so much that he determined, if he lived, to employ an amanuensis. Dr. Pan went down to visit him in the following March, and preached before him. After the sermon the Archbishop, as was his usual practice, conferred with him in private, and said, "I thank you for your sermon; I am going out of the world, as I now desire, according to you text-To seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God." On the 20th of March the Archbishop had spent all the earlier part of the day in his study, and when the light failed him, he visited a lady who was dying in the house, and occupied the time till supper in giving her advice, and preparing her for that journey which he himself was the first to take. At supper he complained of a violent pain in his hip, which was supposed to be a return of the sciatica with which he had been afflicted. The next morning the pain affected his side, which it then appeared arose from pleuritic inflammation. Medical aid was ineffectual, and after several hours of acute pain, his strength was so much reduced that it was manifest he could not long survive. He prepared for the awful termination like one to whom the thought of death was familiar, and having joined in prayer with the chaplain of the countess, he addressed those around him, and exhorted them to prepare for death in the time of their health and strength. He then took leave of the Countess of Peterborough, and having expressed his grateful thanks to her for her continued acts of kindness to him, he executed the last remains of his strength in giving her spiritual counsel, as the best return he could make; he then requested that he might be left alone to his private devotions. The last words he was heard to utter, were " O Lord, forgive me, especially my sins of omission." Soon after he sunk to rest about eight o'clock in the afternoon of the 21st of March in the seventy-sixth year of his age and the thirty-fifth of his episcopate, having been four years Bishop of Meath,

The Lessee has thus guaranteed to him the entire benefit of his improvements and increased value of the Land he occupies, should he wish to purchase. But he may, if he pleases, refuse to call for the Freehold; the option being completely with the

the chooses to do so, within the term of Ten Years; but should had harvests or any other unforeseen misfortunes visit him, he has always the amount deposited, with interest accrued, at his disposal to meet them. The advantages of this account are confined to the Company's actual Lessee Settlers, during the continuance of their Leases. There will be a Vacation of Six Weeks at Midsummer, and a Fortnight at Christmas; during which, should any Young Gentlemen remain in the Establishment, they will pay at the rate of One Pound a Week;—and none will be received for a period less than a year.
